If they elected to slaughter every white person nothing could prevent them. While they knew us to be Americans, we were 'ferringhees,' and that was enough. They would kill us even for the sake of plunder. We decided that we stood no show at the station, and that we must take care of ourselves. Had we started off on the highway for Ayoda or Bela we should have been ambushed or followed. It was finally concluded that we should retreat to an old ruin about five miles away-a spot we had visited a week before-and there wait for the cloud to blow over or the worst to come. Early Monday morning, on pretence that we were going to make surveys and excavations for the benefit of history, we secured a cart, loaded it with provisions, arms and ammunition, and started off, each of us mounted on horseback. We closed up the bungalow and took our servants with us. They seemed very willing to go, but we soon discovered the cause. Monday night all deserted, taking our three horses along. They wanted us out of the way when the mutiny opened, that the garrison might be weakened just so much. The two other members of the party were Henry Wilds and George Fisher. We had then been in India together for a year and had stood back to back in many tight places. Wilds was a typical Yankee, good-natured but courageous, and his long arms had the strength of a horse's leg. The thicket was so dense that our fort could not be seen unless one penetrated it a few yards. The natives simply supposed that we were lying close in the centre of the jungle, and half an hour after the groom left us about thirty muskets began blazing away at our position. This ended the fighting. The rabble went off, and for the next ten days not a native came near us. At the end of that time we got word that the British had the upper hand again in Sultanpoor, and we left our fort and returned there. Not one of us was the worse off, and yet we had done considerable toward reducing the number of mutineers. A Check is not Cash Payment.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota has lately rendered a decision of much interest to the business community in declaring that bank checks are not cash, and do not possess legal value as money until cashed. In other words, the giving of a check on a bank is not a payment when passed between debtor and creditor, but only becomes so when the money is received on it.

The court holds that in accepting a check from a debtor there is no legal presumption that the creditor takes it in absolute payment, but only conditionally, or as a written acknowledgment of the debt. Where goods are sold for cash on delivery, and the purchaser tenders payment in a check or draft on his banker, such payment is only conditional: and the delivery of the goods, if made, is also conditional. If the check is dishonored on presentation, the seller may retake the goods for the purchase money, even from the posession of a third or innocent party, unless it can be shown that the seller has been guilty of negligence as would estop him from recovering in equity.

This decision is among the first rendered by higher courts that is so far-reaching, and if supported by other high tribunals, will settle a mooted question in commercial circles. The same principle has been applied to unpaid notes by one or two courts, which have held that seller does not lose his lien, for purchase money, on goods sold, until he receives the actual cash, and may retake at any time prior thereto if the indebtedness be not met at maturity.

Toads in Rocks.

Many well authenticated stories of the finding of live toads and frogs in solid rock are on record, and that such things are possible was demonstrated here recently, when the workmen engaged in Varley & Everill's lime rock quarry, north of the city, broke open a large piece of rock which had been blasted out, and a frog hopped out of a pocket in the centre of the stone, says the Salt Lake Herald. Of course, the occurrence created a tremendous sensation among the workmen, and operasuspended, and the movements of the frog were watched with great interest. The animal was somewhat smaller than the ordinary frog, and was perfectly white. Its eyes were unusually large apparently blind. Where the mouth should have been there was only a line, and on the feet was a dark, horny substance. Mr. Everill at once took charge of the curiosity and put it in a tin can, but the frog died the next morning. After forty-one years under water He brought it down town, and it was examined with interest by a large number of people, and it was afterward presented to the museum, where it will be preserved in alcohol.

POLITICS.

The duly authorized representatives of the Republican party met at the Temple of Justice, Norristown, Tuesday, and constructed a ticket which can be readily gleaned from the various ballots, as given below:

STATE SENATOR. W. D. Heebner, Lansdale, Dr. Lewis Royer, Norristown, ASSEMBLY Theo. W. Bean, Norristown, Frank A. Comly, Whitemarsh, J. H. Dager, Whitemarsh, J. B. Goentner, Abington, C. Tyson Kratz, Lower Providence, Dr. Chas. Moore, Pottstown, A. L. Taggart, Upper Merion, * Nominees PROTHONOTARY

OBSERVATIONS.

The Convention was a hummer! Yea, verily!

The political cog-wheels and journals appeared to be well oiled.

when the greater portion of the Hub politicians. was dreaming Heebner of Lansdale and sundry lower end disciples held a secret conclave; it was agreed to combine the forces of the two sections and thus secure the nomination of Heebner for Senator and of Crawford for Register of Wills. The lower end intriguers delivered their goods, and being assisted by the Boss of the upper end, Heebner won his battle, When the time was due for Heebner to size up his end for Crawford there was a hitch in the scheme, and Crawford didn't

The ticket, both from a personal and geographical standpoint, is rather a strong one, with the exception of the candidate for Senator, and the methods he used in securing his nomination will further weaken a weak nomination. If any?-by adopting a resolution to exthe Democrats take advantage of this conspicuous error of their opponents Mr. Heebner will be defeated in spite of all the additional insane zeal he can muster between now and November.

The nomination of David Roberts, of Worcester, for Director of the Poor, places a first-class man before the public for a responsible position of public trust. He is qualified, he is honest, he has a level-head and plenty of common sense, and if he is elected the people will never have cause to regret their choice. And this much will also fully apply to our townsman, A. D. Fetterolf Esq., candidate for Register of Wills. He conducted an honorable canvass and won by reason of his popularity throughout the county. We think the re-nomination of Taggart, was the proper thing to do.

THE tariff bill, the pet child of Mc-Kinley, having been finally agreed to by both Senate and House, now needs only the signatures of the presiding officers of both houses and the President of the United States to become a State, Treasury, War and Navy to law. One of the many "good protection" features of the measure is a tax of $16,000,000 on tin-plate for the further enrichment of the Tin Trust sharks. Of course it is claimed that this tax to be filched from the masses—the consumers—will stimulate the manufacture of our own tin-plate and advance the interests of home labor, It will, eh? Who will get the oyster, and who the shell? How has it been heretofore? Just ask your nearest tinsmith and the consumers of tinware.

Congress in the Twenty-eight district | was first opened, it seems a little queer -Clarion, Forest, Elk and Centre counties-was a huge Democratic blunder. To knock down the chosen leader of the party right in the heat of a campaign was a foolhardy act.

THE present campaign in this county will be of short duration; though brief it will be intense. After next Tuesday the excitement will begin in earnest and early in November there will surely be a number of knock-downs. The formation of a farmers' ticket, at this juncture, would bring into existence an interesting side-show.

133 Richard Vaux by the Independent Democrats of the Third district, Philadelphia, is simply another indication mistake and telegraphed the operator 153 of a disposition on the part of the here that there would be a wreck pretty people to now and then recognize brains soon and left his post. There is a possibility that the democratic Senators may take advantage of the power which they unquestionably possess to hang the tariff bill up until it is too late for the President to call an extra session of Congress, unless the republicans will agree to abandon the idea of holding an extra session to pass the Election bill. Letter from J. G. Fetterolf.

YERKES, PA., September 22, 1890. Editor Independent :- The spirit has again noved me, and if you will grant me space I shall try and give my fellow-farmers and taxpayers some of my thoughts. In doing so I wish them to know that I have no selfish motives of my own, but only desire to benefit my fellow man. Let us look at our affairs and see whether they are fairly conducted or not, and if not, who is to blame. The time is fast approach ing when we will go to the polls and cast our ballots. The political slate has already been leaves a widow, one daughter and three | made by the bosses, they are making the cansons, namely : Julia, Henry, and Geo. | vass, and if you vote a straight ticket without W. Yost, of this place, and Charles regard to the candidates, you will be put down as all right; if you vote for men, rather than party, for those who will be likely to best represent the interests of the people, you will be of the party workers he had me marked doubtful, and I am proud of the mark! Others like have begun to think, and when many of them cast their ballot they will do it independently and intelligently. The time has come when the interests of agriculture are of far greater importance than the interests of any one man or party. The census of 1890 will tell you the population of the United States is nearly 70,-000,000; about 40,000,000 of this population are engaged in agriculture; we are the greatest nation on the face of the earth, and at peace with all other nations. Now, fellow farmers, why is agriculture so depressed? How is it that the farmers of Montgomery county have lost in the depresiation of their homes ten or twelve million dollars in the past fifteen years, and the Sheriff is selling right and left? We have been voting straight party tickets headed with lawyers to represent us in the Legislature and in dition. We are the majority, what are your inand without regard for party vote for farmers equal to our numeration and the amount of taxes we pay. As soon as we do this we will have something to expect and no sooner. As hand and foot, and unless we throw the shackles we will ever be slaves, under the party lash, to

THE PREVENTION OF HOG CHOLERA.

The following remarks upon the pretaken from the American Cultivator the causes that would produce it. Breed from healthy and vigorous parents. Provide clean and comfortable quarters, pure and wholesome food. By exercise and judicious feeding preexcess of fat, especially in hot weather. Prevent the danger of their contracting the disease, by taking care not to introduce animals from any herd where it exists or has existed, or by allowing any person or animal from such a herd to visit your herd. The filth that contains the disease germs may be easily carried, and does not lose its power even when dried to a dust. Guard against running streams where there may be sick herds above discharging their poisonous excrements into the water.

If feeding city swill, try to get it and use it before the process of decay has gone too far in it, and, if this is not possible, strive to counteract the effects of this by sprinkling the swill with land plaster or air-slaked lime, or, what is better than either, pulverized charcoal. The lime in either form should be used sparingly, only just enough to counteract the acid that forms in the fermenting swill. The charcoal may be used more freely, as it cannot injure the hog to eat all it can take. It is also well to give daily doses to such hogs, or to any hogs that show signs of scouring, of some simple remedies that will quicken the action of stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys, that the whole process of digestion may go on without hindrance.

If after these precautions the disease should break out or be introduced into the herd, the first thing to be attended to is the separation of those that show signs of the disease from those that do not. In doing this, if possible, put the well ones into a place where no disease has been. They may be disinfected by throwing over them a two per cent. solution of carbolic acid and water, and letting them walk through this solution, or by driving them through very dry air slaked lime deep enough to cover the hoof, and also scattering the same among the bedding in their new quarters. With the sick ones give more powerful doses of medicine to act upon the digestive organs, and disinfect their quarters every day by thorough wetting down with the above solution of carbolic acid, or by a thin whitewash, using about one pound of quicklime in two pailfuls or gallons of water.

The manure and bedding should be removed at least once a day from the pens, and thickly covered with lime, or soaked with the lime whitewash above named. All that die should be deeply Shaving, Hair Cutting, Shampooing buried and covered with plenty of quicklime. In this manner a cure is not only possible, but probable, for more than one-half of those that are attacked, while it will be prevented from spreading far among those that are not taken at first.

Among the articles of feed most to be avoided when there are indications of cholera, or even a scouring, are grain that has been damaged by heating or moulding in the bin, and meat scraps which may contain the flesh of animals that had the disease, as these disease germs are long-lived in the dried flesh.

To give medicine to a sick hog is not an easy task to those who do not know how, but simple enough in most cases. It is of no use to try to drench them, as is done with other animals, but if they will come to the trough and eat, mix the medicine in a little milk, or in grain but slightly moistened, and put it in the trough. If they eat at all, they will eat this. If they will not eat or are too weak to stand, the medicine may be mixed with a little molasses. and with a spoon made from a bit of PHILADELPHIA. shingle it can be put well back on the hog's tongue, as an attendant opens his mouth. They will seldom refuse to swallow such a dose, as they like the

After cholera has prevailed in a herd, the pens, and, in fact, the entire building, should be disinfected by the free use of the carbolic acid solution and the whitewash. If the sick animals have had the run of the pasture, do not allow other hogs to go there for some months, and better not until after heavy frosts. The season when cholera is most likely to prevail is during the time of sudden and severe changes in the weather, say in Spring and Fall, excepting with those that are fed upon city swill. With them the danger is increased by the fermenting condition of the swill in extreme hot weather, and they are more liable to be attacked in August or September. Rag Carpet woven to order in any style desired. If they escape longer there is yet a good chance of their coming down when a sudden change of temperature weakens them.

The amount of money lost through hog cholera every year amounts to millions of dollars in the United States. Much of this, of course, is in the Westvention and cure of hog cholera were ern States, but as nearly 500 farmers are on record as drawing swill from and are worthy the careful perusal of the yards of this city, and as some of all farmers : The best cure for hog them number their droves by the huncholera is to prevent it by removing dred, it will be easily seen that there are thousands of dollars invested in swine within ten miles of Boston; and if the hog cholera should once begin to rage among them the loss would be a severe one to them. Each man vent the stock hogs from putting on an should guard carefully his own herd, and thus protect his neighbor.

TOMATOES AS A FARM CROP.

It is a mistake to suppose that ex tremely rich soil is needed to grow paying crops of tomatoes. The fact that in olden times they were mainly planted on highly manured gardens led to this erroneous notion. But it is also the fact that as these grow the plants ran too much to leaf and too little to fruit. The fruit where much manure is used is also more liable to rot. This crop uses more of potash and phosphate than potatoes, and if both these minerals were supplied the plant would be properly balanced, and its fruit less liable to premature decay. Dry, sandy soils with mineral fertilizers produce earlier and better crops than richer soil more heavily fertilized with barnyard manure. - Boston Culti-
