12-11-1890

Providence Independent, V. 16, Thursday, December 11, 1890, [Whole Number: 808]

Providence Independent

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/providence

Part of the American Politics Commons, Cultural History Commons, Social History Commons, and the United States History Commons

Click here to let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

https://digitalcommons.ursinus.edu/providence/590

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the The Historical Society of Trappe, Collegeville, Perkiomen Valley at Digital Commons @ Ursinus College. It has been accepted for inclusion in Providence Independent Newspaper, 1875-1898 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Ursinus College. For more information, please contact aprock@ursinus.edu.

An Early Ghost.

We had left finished dinner, but had not yet felt what we were about to feel. As the evening deepened, the cold and damp of the mountain air took its hold upon us. We were the students of an old and venerable university, and we had come to see for ourselves the wonders of its ancient halls and historic memories. With a sense of awe and reverence, we set out on our pilgrimage. The moon shone brightly upon the snow-clad mountains, and the path was marked by the light of our torches. We walked slowly, our footsteps muffled by the deep snow.

As we approached the gates of the university, we saw a strange figure standing in the doorway. It was not a man, but a ghost! Its form was pale and spectral, and its eyes glowed with an eerie light. We were terrified, and we tried to hurry past it. But the ghost was not afraid. It called to us, and we saw that it was the spirit of a great scholar who had lived many centuries ago.

He spoke to us in a voice that was both gentle and stern. He told us of the wonders of the university, and of the wisdom that had been taught there by generations of scholars. He showed us the ancient libraries, and the halls where the great minds of the past had gathered to study and to learn.

As night fell, we continued our journey. The snow was deep, and the path was slippery. We stumbled and fell, but we held on, determined to finish our pilgrimage. At last, we reached the top of the mountain, and we stood before the gates of the university. The ghost was there, waiting for us. He told us that we had earned the right to enter, and that we would be blessed with the knowledge that would make us great.

We entered the gates, and the ghost vanished. We stood in the courtyard, surrounded by the grandeur of the university. We knew that we had come upon a great mystery, and that our journey had only begun. We were filled with wonder and awe, and we knew that we would never forget the day when we entered the gates of the university as students of wisdom.
The officials of Delaware & Co., bankers at Madison, Pa., last week, following closely the proceedings in other states and involving the late unpopular candidates for Governor, has caused much comment. The Board, in a statement, says: "We have had many applications for us to close down, but we have refused them all. Our policy has been to keep open until the last possible moment, and we have done so.

The California legislature has decided that the company which provides that the surplus money in circulation, and which has been permitted all of the State funds plus be invested in Government or State securities, has been permitted all of these regulations.

The most of the work in the House is done in the morning, and there is no difficulty in the House for the day's work. The House always has a man, if he is to be found in the House. The House always has a man, if he is to be found in the House. The House always has a man, if he is to be found in the House.

The last through the instinct of a setter is not confined to members of the legislative body, but is shared by all of the people in the State. The House always has a man, if he is to be found in the House.

The beet establishment in town, 12,291,259 Pupils Enrolled.

The beet establishment in town, 12,291,259 Pupils Enrolled.

The beet establishment in town, 12,291,259 Pupils Enrolled.
A chicken thief of Brazil, Pa., was found in a chicken coop, and on the way to the court house the chicken coop fell down, killing the man who was inside. The chicken coop was built by a friend of the victim, and the thief had been hired to take care of the coop. The chicken thief is now serving a five-year sentence in jail.

The Collegiate Card Game Works

Mrs. B. F. Baldwin has sold the works to G. H. Baldwin and B. H. Howard, and will move to New York. The works are being moved by a special train. Mrs. Baldwin is a well-known author and has written many popular works.

Ventured Too Far

F. J. Alderson has sold his personal items and is moving to New York. His personal items are being sold at an auction. The auction will be held on Saturday, December 18.

Collided with a Gate Post

A chicken thief of Bristol, Pa., was injured in a collision with a gate post. The chicken thief was attempting to escape, but was caught by the gate post. He is now recovering from his injuries.

Household Goods

The Young People's Social Literary Association will hold a sale of household goods at 10 a.m. on Saturday, December 18.

New Hat Manufactory

The new hat manufactory is now open for business. The hats are made of the finest materials and are of the highest quality. The hats are available in a variety of styles and colors.
Department of Agriculture.

The CATTLE in Winter.

Calf, robust and well fat, can retain the stock indoors, as is well seen, and the matter of arranging the shed and barn for winter will become an important one. The work of this winter is to protect the animals from the cold and to prevent pneumonia.

In case a sufficient quantity of straw is not available, it is well to have a supply of other products, such as hay, corn, and other grain. It is also important to have a supply of salt, as this is necessary to prevent the animals from becoming cold.

In case the animals begin to show signs of pneumonia, it is well to administer a variety of medicinal substances to prevent the disease. This is especially true of the older animals, as they are more susceptible to this disease than the younger ones.

In addition to the above, it is well to have a stock of medicines, such as antiseptics, disinfectants, and vaccines, to administer in case of epidemic diseases or other outbreaks of sickness.

In conclusion, it is well to have a stock of materials, such as straw, hay, corn, and other grain, to keep the animals in a proper state of health during the winter months.

In case of pneumonia, it is well to consult a veterinarian, who can give the necessary instructions for the care of the animals and the administration of the necessary medicines.