The Communists in America

"It is the unanimous opinion of this committee that the communist party of the United States is in fact the agent of a foreign government."

Such was the report recently published by the Senate Armed Services Committee. Our problem, then, is how to go about an program that will render useless any communist activities in the U. S. Or, don't you feel that there is a cause for concern when you hear that the base is not injurious, is it harmless, let us say, to the pre-Pearl Harbor Bund?

There are those who think there aren't any new Red threats, and are prone to drift back to those complacent feelings reminiscent of the early Hitler period in Germany, while the communists are at many a family table. Maybe the Bill of Rights guarantees the conveying privileges of those hopped-up street preachers. Then again, cannot those actions be condemned as aspiring to Fifth Column heights? This is where the complications arise. A pure of Red organizations would, in the end, defeat its own purpose. Communism can no more be outlawed than can a war be fought to end all wars.

We refer to that period of the "inquisition" that followed World War I when the "Red Scare" was prevalent. Communist activities were not without a number of injustices against some radical, yet loyal citizens. There exists, however, a marked difference between this period and that of the communists of the 1910 era, and the tightly-knit units now in operation. Granted, that the party strongly believes in the communist idea. Its small, does that detract from its potential? Ex-Assistant Bullitt is quoted in the April 7 issue of Newsweek, saying: "what is important is the claim of the communists is that each for every party member there are ten others ready, willing, and able to do the party's work."

The handling of domestic communist activities will be dictated by our treatment of the guiding light. Russia, whose present government, will always consider any capitalist nation as its most potent enemy. If we alternate potential good will by military preparedness. Russia probably will not be, it a nation, even three years from now. But then, at the rate we are going, we won't either.

Getting back to the home front, it would be a good idea to view with suspicion the anti-war organizations. However, we cannot permit our bases, for example, to be in the hands of the communists. The foreign policy has recently taken a turn and we appreciate that. The Russians have recently a turning point in the development of the communist movement abroad and are laying the groundwork for future communist gains. Our handling of these agencies may greatly affect our security if we are not to become a threat to the United States. The communists in America can be a threat. We won't alienate potential good will by military preparedness. Russia probably will not be a nation, even three years from now. But then, at the rate we are going, we won't either.
