The training of carrier pigeons is based on the fact that all pigeons have a natural instinct to return to their home lofts. This instinct is so strong that they will fly for miles, sometimes even hundreds of miles, to get back home. If you want to send a message, you simply train a carrier pigeon to carry a small note or letter, and it will fly the distance back to your home loft, delivering the message. Carrier pigeons are often used in military and rescue operations, as they are reliable and can travel long distances. They are also used in scientific research, as they can carry small equipment or samples back to the lab.
