BY HELEN FOREST GRAVES.

In the kitchen, the woman was busy with her ironing. She was a small, hardworking woman, with a dark complexion and dark eyes. She was always dressed in black and white, and she had a determined look on her face. She was the only one in the family who knew how to iron properly.

She had been married for ten years, and she had three children. Her husband was a laborer, and they lived in a small, unheated room in the basement of a large house. The family was too poor to afford central heating, so they had to rely on the warmth of the stove and the light from the kerosene lamp in the corner.

The morning was early, and the sun had not yet risen. The woman woke up to the sound of her husband's snoring and the creaking of the bed frame. She got out of bed and went to the kitchen to start the day.

She began by washing the dishes and wiping the counter with a rag. She then cleared the breakfast dishes and set the table for dinner. The woman was used to these tasks, and she did them quickly and efficiently.

The woman's husband was a silent man, and he rarely spoke to her. He worked long hours in the factory, and he spent most of his free time alone. The woman was often left to take care of the children and the house on her own.

The woman was tired and exhausted, but she knew that she had to keep going. She had to take care of her family, and she had to keep the house clean and orderly. She was a strong and determined woman, and she knew how to handle any situation that came her way.

The woman's life was hard, but she was determined to make the best of it. She loved her family, and she would do anything to provide for them. She was a brave and strong woman, and she would always fight for what she believed in.
Gentlemen and ladies: the policy of the Republican party is now a settled one. The big questions have already been decided, and for the next year we shall have but one issue — the question of corruption in the public service. The time is overdue for the destruction of that vice which has been so long a disgrace to our country.

In the present campaign, the Republican candidate for President will be the man who can best be trusted to deal with these evils. This is a question of the most vital importance, and the choice of the President is not to be lightly made. The people of this country are determined to have a man who will not be afraid to take a stand against corruption, and who will not be content with what is. They want a man who will not be satisfied with the mere suggestion of reform, but who will be willing to risk everything to do what is right.

The Republican candidate for the office of Governor of Pennsylvania is a man who stands for the same principles as the President. He is one of the foremost men of the party, and his appointment is a great honor to the Republican cause.

The Republican candidates for Congress are also men of high character and ability. They are men who have the confidence of their constituents, and who are determined to work for the good of the country.

The Republican platform is a true statement of the policy of the party. It calls for the immediate suppression of corruption, and for the establishment of a system of honest government. It is a platform that the people of Pennsylvania can be proud of, and it is a platform that they can trust.

As your representative, I will do everything in my power to carry out the principles of the Republican party. I will work for the suppression of corruption, and I will work for the establishment of a system of honest government. I will work for the good of the country, and I will work for the good of Pennsylvania.

I ask your support and your vote on Tuesday. I ask you to give me a fair trial, and I ask you to give me your vote. I ask you to trust me with the responsibility of representing you in the state legislature.

Thank you for your attention. I will do my best to deserve your confidence and your support.
