AN OLD TRACKING SONG

Red John, W. Jones, Professor of Music at the Tuscaloosa Institute, wrote the following:

The institute is a home for the aged in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.

An interesting song has been composed by Dr. H. T. Cook, of South Bend, Ind., and has been sung by the South Bend Male Chorus, under the direction of Mr. J. H. B. Smith, and is known as "The Song of the South Bend Male Chorus." The song is said to be a musical representation of the life of a South Bend man and is sung to the tune of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The chorus has been rehearsing the song for several weeks and is expected to perform it at the next concert.

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION

The Articles of Confederation, adopted by the United States of America in 1781, were intended to establish a federal government to govern the United States.

The articles provided for a Congress of the United States, consisting of two houses: the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate had two members from each state, and the House of Representatives had one member for each 30,000 inhabitants.

Thehouse of representatives was to be elected by the people, and the Senate was to be elected by the state legislatures. The Senate was to have the power to override the House of Representatives by a two-thirds majority.

The president of the United States was to be elected by the Senate from among the members of the House of Representatives. The president was to serve as both the head of state and the head of government.

The Constitution of the United States, adopted in 1787, replaced the Articles of Confederation and established a stronger federal government.

The new government was to be composed of three branches: the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial. The Legislative branch was to be divided into two houses, the House of Representatives and the Senate. The Executive branch was to be headed by the president, who was to serve as both the head of state and the head of government. The Judicial branch was to be headed by the Supreme Court.

The Constitution also established the Bill of Rights, which guaranteed certain individual freedoms and rights.

Location of the Capital

The Articles of Confederation did not provide for a national capital. The Articles of Confederation did provide for a Congress of the United States, which was to meet in various locations throughout the United States. The Articles of Confederation also provided for the establishment of a national debt, which was to be paid off in ten years.

The Constitution of the United States, adopted in 1787, established the capital of the United States as Washington, D.C. The Constitution also established the executive branch, which was to be headed by the president of the United States.

The president was to be elected by the electoral college, which was to consist of one elector for each state.

The Constitution also established the Supreme Court, which was to be composed of the chief justice and eight associate justices. The Supreme Court was to have the power to interpret the Constitution and to strike down laws that were inconsistent with the Constitution.

The Constitution also established the national debt, which was to be paid off in ten years. The Constitution also established the system of checks and balances, which was to prevent one branch of government from becoming too powerful.

The Constitution also established the Bill of Rights, which guaranteed certain individual freedoms and rights. The Bill of Rights included the right to freedom of speech, the right to freedom of religion, and the right to a speedy and public trial.

FARM NOTES.

Advise will always give good results if light seed and not too much ground is sown of the best varieties for the locality. If none of these is available, locally grown seed should be used, and the varieties should be carefully selected.

A new area of silt is now under cultivation near the farm, which is expected to yield good results. The soil is of a dark, rich color, and the seed is well distributed. The area is well watered, and the seed is in good condition. The crops are expected to be excellent, and the yield is expected to be high.

Opportunity to purchase a well-conditioned horse from a sale of young stock being held at the Pennington Sales Barn, 10 to 20 miles from Philadelphia, near the Delaware line. The horses are of excellent quality, and the sale is expected to be a success.

To keep down crab grass in the lawn, it is necessary to use a good seed mixture. The best results are obtained by using a mixture of grass, clover, and other suitable plants.

The value of finely ground bone as an excellent fertilizer is constantly increasing, and the demand for it is steadily growing.

For the very best results in fertilizing, it is necessary to use good quality bone meal. The best results are obtained by using a mixture of bone meal and other suitable materials.
