The late widows of men, thinking to retire to a new life near the sea, when their husbands died, found it too late to give up the life they had been accustomed to lead. They too often threw up all claim to rights, or to any claim to the fruits of their occupation.

The one hundredth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the United States Capitol was observed Monday with ceremony in Washington, D.C. The ceremonies included the reading of a declaration by President Cleveland and the laying of the foundation stone by him.

Mr. Cleveland has given to many of the people of this country a reason for rejoicing. He has shown them that the government, under his administration, is not only strong but just. The people of the United States have always been proud of their government, but they have never been satisfied with it. Mr. Cleveland has shown them that the government is capable of improvement, and that it is capable of giving the people what they want.

The crisis may be on at any moment, but the people of the United States are not afraid. They have faith in their government, and they know that it will do its duty. The people of the United States are not afraid to have their faith put to the test.

The people of the United States are not afraid to have their faith put to the test.

The Ohio Farmer gives the following interesting account of weather conditions in the States, most necessary and most important part of which is as follows:

In the northern part of the nation, the weather conditions have been favorable for the best results in this season. The crop is now in full bloom, and the farmers are doing everything necessary to make the crop a success. This season’s weather has been unusually favorable for the growth of wheat, and the farmers are now doing everything necessary to make the crop a success.
