Department of Agriculture, Social Life on the Farm.

One of the questions at the Congress of Agriculture in Chicago has been the "reclamation of farm life to be made attractive." More farmers than ever before are recognizing the need for improving their home life and the health of their families. The government has been trying to meet this need by providing free advice and education programs. There is a growing interest in home economics and the importance of good nutrition. Much effort is being directed towards improving rural living conditions.
