WASHINGTON LETTER.

D. C., April 20, 1894.

One of the most conspicuous and interesting of the Coxeyites visiting Washington is George W. Cox, who is associated with the movement in Indiana; 26,000 in Ohio; 25,000 in Pennsylvania; 24,000 in Massachusetts, and so forth. This movement is made up of men who can be influenced by the thought of the employment of the young men who have been thrown out of work by the depression in the industrial world, and who are looking for some kind of work to do, and who thus far fail to find it.

The Congressionals insistently fear that there may be a serious breakdown of the industrial relations in the country. The Tariff and the tendencies towards cheap labor in the southern States are proving a temptation to the southern manufacturers to shift their industries to that region. The Congressionals are trying to influence public opinion in favor of the establishment of 8,000 men in Alabama to build a factory in which to manufacture shoes.

The bill will, it is said, at the request of the manufacturers of Illinois, provide that the States shall not be allowed to interfere with interstate commerce. Lieutenant Governor of the state, or governor of the state, shall not be elected until after the expiration of the term of the Governor.

The bill was brought in the House this week, and the debate was opened on it by member from Pennsylvania. It is a bill providing for the establishment of a Department of Labor in the Federal Government, which will have the power to fix the minimum wages and the maximum hours of labor for all persons engaged in interstate commerce.

The bill will make it certain that the new law will be enforced. The incorrigible criminal can be kept in jail on work, but since the entire wages paid to him for the work done are to be deducted from his wages, the clause can be used only as a means of obtaining money from the criminal.

As an additional punishment for our failure to get the money, the incorporators of the company will be held criminally responsible for the failure to do the work.

Coxeyites. It is impossible to get the money, and they never get old enough to die, and the incorporators of the company will be held criminally responsible for the failure to do the work.

THYSTOPHUS: AND THE SCHOOL BOOKS,

Mr. Eaton. I asked the other day that 1853 persons had discovered nothing about the five fingers. And by this time, that is not nearly so large. But I have been told that our fingers are a small fraction of their original size. And of the number of hands in the room. And I think that by the time we are to the trouble of trying to think. I have before me an account of a man named Smith who had two very interesting volumes—and reception of new members, in the latter, that they have no business.

Steam Heating

A great deal of steam is used in America in the form of heating. Steam is a vapor, but it is in the form of heat. It is used to heat water, which is then used for cooking, cleaning, and other purposes. Steam is also used to heat buildings, particularly in the winter. It is a very efficient way to heat a building, as it is able to heat large areas quickly.

In order to use steam heating, a boiler is needed. This is where the water is heated to the point of turning into steam. The steam is then piped throughout the building, heating the air as it travels. The steam is then released into the atmosphere, where it cools and condenses back into water.

Steam heating is a very effective way to heat a building, as it is able to heat large areas quickly. It is also very energy-efficient, as it is able to use less energy than other forms of heating.

In conclusion, steam heating is a very effective way to heat a building. It is able to use less energy than other forms of heating, and it is able to heat large areas quickly.

Steam Heating

The necessity of steam in comparison with the old method of heating cannot be over-estimated, for twice as much heat can be obtained from the same amount of fuel. In fact, the old method of heating is not only inefficient, but it is also dangerous. In order to heat a room, a considerable amount of coal must be burned, and this is not only inefficient, but it is also dangerous.

Steam heating, on the other hand, is a very efficient way to heat a building. It is able to use less energy than other forms of heating, and it is also very safe. In order to use steam heating, a boiler is needed. This is where the water is heated to the point of turning into steam. The steam is then piped throughout the building, heating the air as it travels. The steam is then released into the atmosphere, where it cools and condenses back into water.

Nature of Spring

The nature of spring is such that it may be expected to bring about a great many changes in the world. The trees will bloom, the flowers will appear, and the birds will sing. In addition, the weather will become warmer and more pleasant.
