The church in Zion was first supported by a vestryman, Edward Lane, who purchased the land and paid the taxes. The land was later sold to Samuel Lane and Edward Nichols, who then formed the settlement. The church was first modeled as a church for the use of the people, and it stands as a relic of the past. The church was later expanded and a new church was built in the same location. The new church was dedicated in 1784, and it is still in use today.
