TEACHING OPPORTUNITIES AND SPRING BREAKS

The Thoroughbred organizations of Urbana University and the animal performances of Handel's "Messiah" and Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" are being advertised in the school's bulletin. The schools are calling for the chorus parts, and in accordance with the current interest in outstanding personalities in the musical world, there has been a demand for the Urbana choristers as soloists.

In December, the school will be the home of Madame Martha Awbrey Baker, president of the school, and the noted conductor of the Cape Cod Institute of Music at East Brookfield, Mass., and also a member of the Urbana faculty.

Miss Jeanette N. Smith, Canadian conductor residing in New York City, will again be with us this year. It is understood that Miss Smith will be in New York November 15th and at Urbana on December 12th.

The term will be Mrs. Steely Jamison, who so delighted the audience with her performance in the work of the National Broadcasting Company, has recently been occupied with experimental program work and will be heard in "The Three Wolffs," and during the week following the Thanksgiving Day, Mrs. N. K. "Very Warm" volunteers will return to the school for the second year in a row.

The students of the Urbana alumni who have participated in this presentation during the last two years are invited to return again to the production this year. They are requested to be at rehearsals on Thursday afternoon, December 12, at 3 p.m.

A limited number of seats will be available for sale on Friday, December 12, at the price of $5.00 per seat. Those desiring to secure them by contacting William Baker, 1940, at the school office.

The Rev. Nevin Harner, a professor of music at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak for the chorus parts, and in accordance with the current interest in outstanding personalities in the musical world, there has been a demand for the Urbana choristers as soloists.

modern world has ever seen.

That a few, but only a very few, hope students do not believe thi undergraduates is a deeply rooted belief that this is not our war. We should have no part in this war because it does not concern us. Hitler and his legions can never reach the point where they will be in a position to launch an attack on us. This last "is one of the most potent argu­

tions which the underprivileged are able to be present to aid against Britain or involve ment in the present war."

On the other hand, Mr. Cram's article is a summary, which gives the flood of responses to to Mr. Whitridge article, of a crosssecion of American undergraduate opinion on questions relating to the war. Lest this discussion be prolonged to the point of utter boredom, the report on his summary will confine itself to brief and pertinent quotations therefrom.

The first, and by far the largest category of undergraduates, is one of isolationist and semi-isolationist sentiment. Virtually everyone, too, accepts the need for adequate military defense. Many accept the policy of full material aid to Britain, but on realistic rather than idealistic grounds.

Mr. Whitridge thinks the menace of armed invasion serious, at least for a long time. Moreover, what our duty should be in the present crisis brings the divergence between the undergraduates. While our young men do not see any moral issue involved. Further they accuse his leading of keeping them from using their own power. They are the children of depres sion and isolation. To them the only way to make sure Hitler never reaches this stage in his influence over us is to prepare a preventive in the one type of influence that he recognizes—Force. In the next few years we must build the best and the greatest organization for national defense of which we are capable. To neglect this would be to tempt fate too strongly and perhaps to sacrafice our hopes and our freedom for generations to come.

The argument of Mr. Cram and Mr. Whitridge is that the only way of the isolationist has passed. More than ever America today is an integral part of the political, social, and economic make-up of this world. The sooner we take cognizance of this fact and act accordingly, the sooner America, political and economic, will become a living creation rather than a hypothetical something on "order."

Coach Hashagen Predicts Fighting Spirit To Replace Losses in Court Veterans

By Don Johnson '43

"You will see a fighting basketball team this year, one with a lot of spirit, even though it should not be expected to win too many games," said "Ken" Hashagen, coach of the Temple basketball team, when he was questioned about the prospects for the coming season.

He stated that this year he would be hard-put to get a squad on the floor, once many varsity players were lost through graduation and other likely prospects for varsity berths are ineligible at present.

Fetterman, who are holdovers from the varsity squad of last year, and "Buddy" Adams, who is on the squad last year, will have to tryout for the team.

The coach said that the season's future will depend on the return of Jake, Nat, Don, the sophomores and those ineligible. He believes that the team will have a lot more fight than last year, due to his duties as junior head waiter.

Problems that face college students was again the theme of the second in a series of three informal Wednesday evening discussions led by the Rev. Edwin N. Foye '24, minister of Trinity Reformed Church.

The Rev. Mr. Foye and his audience of students, parents, and faculty members, considered mainly the effect of college upon religious faith, if he has had experience and who is eligible to come out this year, due to his duties as junior head waiter.
