It has been a recent pleasure of the editor to review "Pennsylvania-The Keystone," a short history by Samuel Whitaker Pennypacker who served, with especially noteworthy distinction, as Governor of the Commonwealth from 1903 to 1907. The volume is a most illuminating and praiseworthy contribution to the historical literature of the State. Though brief in its treatment of all the more important events associated with the first settlement and later development of a great Commonwealth, it is concise, lucid, and essentially authentic. Moreover, it contains numerous references to events of moment not included in any previously published history of the State, and its original contributions to historical lore are particularly worthy of notice and commendation. It is unique, strong, instructive, and frequently reveals the masterful literary genius of its author. It deserves a place in every public school and in every public and private library in the State. The history is published by the Christopher Sower Company, 124 North 18th Street, Philadelphia; library edition, $1.00; school edition, $0.75.

SINCE the negro problem continues to perplex students of social conditions and those, in certain sections, who incline to take pessimistic views of the colored race, it is well worth while to note that a tabulation made in Philadelphia shows that there are among the ebony-hued population of that city 200 clergymen, 60 physicians, 32 dentists, 9 lawyers, 75 stenographers, 204 clerks and copyists, 117 musicians, 45 graduate nurses, 15 druggists, 297 retail merchants, 29 blacksmiths, 250 postal clerks, 10 wholesale merchants, 72 upholsterers, 6 roofers and slaters, 24 plasterers, 10 paperhangers, 57 painters, 308 brick and stone masons, 176 iron and steel workers, 96 carpenters and joiners, 5 electrical engineers, 15 stationary engineers. Besides these vocations the colored people of Philadelphia have one bank, which last year handled over $1,000,000, two drug stores, two hospitals, 14 building and loan associations, and they own $10,000,000 worth of real estate. This tabulation indicates the possibilities of the future in the direction of a final solution of the race problem.

THE labor movement is entitled to every just consideration, but when its leaders employ lobbyists and dictate legislation specially in behalf of labor and regardless of its real rights, it is time to class such leaders with those who subvert legislation for the benefit of other interests. It is easy enough for Samuel Gompers to contend that the labor lobby was a perfectly legitimate one. It was also "legitimate" for a labor leader to declare that Representative J Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, had "signed his political death warrant" because he had the courage to oppose the labor exemption provisions of the anti-trust bill. Labor trusts are just as obnoxious in some of their inclinations as capital trusts and all of them, when of the best foods if they contain a conguilty of infamous conduct, should be punished alike.

Mr. Brumbaugh, Republican candidate for Governor, puts much emphasis upon his announced aversion to being placed under any political obligations to Penrose or the Republican organization. He claims to be running in harmony with his own platform. It will be interesting to observe how the organization Republicans who voted for Mr. Brumbaugh at the primaries will regard their candidate's attitude. The fact remains, however, that the Republican candidate for Governor would not have received the nomination had it not been for the support of Boise Penrose and his lieutenants. Mr. Brumbaugh must not protest too much. He should remember that the company he would ignore is of his own choosing, and that his political companions will hardly come to regard him as a particular paragon of human perfection because he protests against the power that favored him with the Republican nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania.

THE long, bitter fight in Congress over the repeal clause of the Panama Canal act, came to a close on Friday when the Senate amendment, reserving all rights the United States may have under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, or otherwise, was accepted by a vote of 210 to 71. President Wilson has signed the exemption repeal measure. The New York World comments as follows on the action of Congress: "Intellectually, the campaign against the repeal of the exemption clause has been almost beneath contempt. It has been a campaign that appealed to the cheapest and most reprehensible instincts of jingoism. It has been a campaign both of fraud and of falsehood. It has been a campaign to cloak under the American flag a raid on the United States Treasury, and to a truly patriotic citizen that is about the meanest and most contemptible of all forms of false pretenses...... No other Congress will venture to undo what this Congress has done. No other Congress will undertake to violate the terms of a solemn treaty and make the honor of the United States an international byword. No other Congress will undertake to subsidize a monopoly at the expense of all the American people and then try to conceal the graft by wrapping it up in the Ameri-

Dr. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, writes for The Delineator about some of the forces which promise long life to the American Republic. He considers: Toleration in religion. Universal education. Better family life than that of any perished republic. Better and juster inheritance laws. Extreme publicity in all activities. Organization on a large scale of corporations which "afford a new discipline for thousands of managing or directing people." Besides, yet by no means in the last place: "Universal suffrage prolongs in the United States the effect of universal education; for it stimulates all citizens throughout their lives to reflect on problems outside the narrow circle of their private interests and oc cupations; to read about public questions; to discuss public characters, and to hold themselves ready in some degree to give a rational account of their political faith.'

POULTRY A POULTRY owner's troubles and losses do not actually begin until he has a few scores of baby chickens on his hands. Success or failure will be determined at this

Chickens do not require food for the first thirty-six hours after hatching. One of the best foods that can be fed the first few days is stale bread soaked in milk. This should be crumbled fine and placed where the chickens have free access to it and where they cannot step on it. One of the difficult problems for the poultryman is to devise some means for feeding little chickens so that they can consume the food without soiling it. If placed on the floor of the brooder or the brooder run the larger part of the food will be trampled upon and will soon become unfit to eat. Small, narrow travs or troughs are easily made and answer the purpose of keeping the chicks from tramping on their food.

Granulated oats (with the hulls removed) make an excellent food for young chickens. There is perhaps no better grain for young chickens than oats prepared in this manner. It may be fed to good advantage after the second or third day in connection with the bread sopped in milk.

The chickens should have free access to some kind of grit after the first day. Coarse sand makes an excellent grit for young chickens. As they get a little older some coarser material must be provided.

Milk is an excellent food for these young fowls, but it requires skill in feeding. One of the great difficulties in rearing fowls is to carry young chickens through the first two weeks without bowel disorders. Too low temperature in the brooder, improper food and injudicious feeding, even if the right kinds of food are given, each plays an important part in producing these disorders. After the first ten days milk may be given more freely perhaps than during the earlier stages of the chick's existence.

A mixture of fine middlings, wheat bran, cornmeal and a little linseed meal softened with milk makes a valuable food. Hard boiled eggs may be fed from the beginning, but, like milk, require more skill than the feeding of bread sopped in milk. On farms where screenings from the various grains become really a by product these form a cheap and efficient food for chickens. Wheat screenings especially form one have been cracked in threshing. Then weed seeds that have some feeding value and are relished by the fowls. They not only provide sustenance, but give variety, and this in a measure improves the general health.

A good mixture of grains is equal parts of whole wheat, cracked corn and prefer to feed wheat one day, corn the next and oats the next. This is all right either way. Grain once a day is sufficient if a variety of other food is obtainable. A cheap and valuable food is stale bread or rolls which bakeries and restaurants sell at 1 cent a pound. Hotel and restaurant table scraps may also be obtained at a small cost. Al kinds of vegetables, raw or cooked may be used. Meat scraps or ground bone may be fed sparingly with mash. Give the grain in a clean litter early in the morning, mash at noon and vege tables, softened bread or grain in the evening. Make the mash with skimmilk if it is available. Sour milk and whey are good substitutes now and again for mature fowls. Where fowls are kept in confinement it will be necessary to supply som. meat food. Finely cut fresh bone from the meat markets is one of the best, if not the best, kind of meat for laying exhibits. hens. Unfortunately it is not praticable for many poultrymen to depend wholly on this product, for the reason that it is often inconvenient or impossible to obtain, and when once secured t cannot be kept in warm weather without becoming tainted. Tainted bones should be rejected as unfit for food. Skimmilk may be substituted wholly or in part for meat food with out a decrease in egg production, pro vided the proper grain ration is given

TO LABOR IS TO PRAY. A priest was called upon to pray over the barren fields of his parishioners. He passed from one inclosure to another and pronounced his benediction until he came to a most unpromising case. He surveyed the sterile acres in despair. Reminds Us of Old P. T. Barnum's Sacred Elephant - - -You Remember the Part Whitewash Played in Its Production.

So when you see "all-wool" clothes advertised at $9.98 or some other catch price look for "whitewash" because the process of producing clothes to sell at such figures hasn't been discovered yet, and won't be for some time to come. This week we're demonstrating the greater value-giving ability of The Live

Store in an especially selected lot of MID-SEASON CLOTHES FOR MEN AND YOUNG MEN produced for us by a well-known Rochester maker who makes Clothes for the best city stores.

Their QUALITY, aside from being self-evident, is guaranteed on our old-time popular basis of "satisfaction or your money back." We claim without fear of contradiction, that their equal cannot be fairly offered at anything near these prices:

$12.50, $15.00 and $18.00

A Medicine to Produce Love

By P. A. MITCHEL

"Wonderful discoveries these, doctor, that scientists are making in serums for arresting disease," said David Waterman to his friend Dr. Pulsifer. "Very," was the laconic reply. "There is one remedy, however, the scientists have paid little attention

"What's that?" "The imagination."

"I have used it." "The power of the imagination is illustrated daily in a thousand different ways. A smoker with his eyes shut cannot tell whether or not the weed he smokes is lighted. I have myself drunk a glass of ale, thinking it to be lager beer, and supposed it to be beer soured. "Singular, isn't it?"

"Very." "I wonder if that is not the way love is produced." "Certainly. Love is a product of the imagination. "Why, then, can't you produce it by playing upon the imagination?" "I can and have done it. In the case of one of my patients who made herself ill by worrying whether she loved a man well enough to marry him I pretended to make a mistake in giving her a love medicine. She married the man she was in doubt about and is now a healthy and happy

"I WOULDN'T LIKE TO TELL THAT," DICK

A girl of seventeen entered a room adjoining the one in which the two men were chatting just in time to hear this last statement of Dr. Pulsifer. catching only the words "giving her a love medicine" and what followed. A love medicine! She had never heard of such a thing. Could it be possible that doctors could give a medicine to produce love? She had never been in love, but was very curious to know how one in love would feel. She stood very still, hoping to hear more on this interesting topic, but Dr. Pulsifer had caught a glimpse of her and was silent. This young lady was Dolly Waterman, the daughter of one of the men who had been conversing. A few days later Dick Otis, a young fellow of nineteen, who had formerly been her playmate and was now her friend, came to see her, and another dialogue consequent on the first took place. "Dick," said Dolly, "do you know that there is a medicine to produce

"No, I don't," replied Dick, opening his eyes very wide.

"Who told you that rubbish?" "It can't be rubbish, for I heard Dr. Pulsifer telling it to father." "What did he say?" "Why, he said he gave a love medicine to a girl who was one of his pa-"Dr. Pulsifer said that?" "Yes, he did. And he said, too, that she married the man it was to make her in love with and is now a happy

Now, Dick Otis was by no means as unsophisticated as Dolly. He at once saw that there might be an opportu nity. Love was not the subject of interest to him it was to her, for most young men of his age are given rather to love of self than love for any one else. He at once resolved to pretend to tumble to the idea. "If Dr. Pulsifer hadn't said that I shouldn't have believed it." "Fact," said Dolly. "Did he say how long it required for the stuff to take effect?"

"I didn't hear him say that." "I'd like to get some of his medi-"What for?"

"Well, I know a girl who I think is sweet on me. She's a good match, but somehow I can't get up any emotion for her. Perhaps if I were to take a bottle of Dr. Pulsifer's medicine it would start me.' "I know who you mean. You'd have to take a dozen bottles to get up the slightest fancy for a girl like that." "I believe I'll go to the doctor and ask him for the prescription." "Why? Do you want to take it?"

"No; I want to see how it affects Not long after this Dick came to see Dolly with a bottle, very prettily done up, with the word "Amoria" written on the label. He told Dolly that he had got it from Dr. Pulsifer-in which statement he broke the eighth commandment-and that he was going to take some of it. Wouldn't she like to this post." take some too? Dolly asked him whom it would make him in love with, whereupon he assured her that she was mistaken in that part of the matter. A love medicine couldn't make a man diculous. Dolly admitted that it was per out of the bottle and held the liquid under her nose.

"Smells like roses," she said.
"That's one of the chief ingredients," Dick informed her.

"Why then, I wonder?" -like putting wedding cake under your | ing ride.

"Have you taken a dose yet?" "No; I'm going to take one tonight-

Dolly said she didn't care to be in to know how it would affect him and begged him to take a dose. He steadily refused till she gave in and agreed to take some of it too. Then Dick poured a little into another bottle and left her the one he had brought.

Now, Dolly only consented to take the medicine for the sake of learning how it would affect Dick. She made a mental reservation. She would take it if she didn't forget to do so. But she didn't forget it. When she went to bed she took up the bottle, looked at it, held it up to the light and smelled of it. The perfume was delicious. She touched it with her tongue and it was like a new kind of candy. She poured a tiny bit into a spoon and put it between her lips. It was so nice that she concluded to take half a teaspoonful, which, being only half a dose, wouldn't affect her. It was so delicious that she concluded to take the other half teaspoonful. When she went to bed she had taken all there was in

Dick had promised to come to see her the next evening and tell her how of fun; since he intended to pretend that he was madly in love with her. Nevertheless he determined not to hurry matters nor to overdo it. "Well?" said Dolly as soon as they

there was in the bottle." "With what result?" "I went to sleep dreaming of a girl posed I felt only a friendship for her, and had always loved her." "Oh, dear! Who is she?" There wasn't the slightest reason for | Companion this question, for Dick told her with his eyes who the girl was.

"Don't you feel any different?" He was standing very near her, she resting one hand on a table on which there were violets. Dick took the other hand in his. He stood thus for a few moments, looking into her eyes, which were bent down upon the violets. Then he bent forward to her lips, she withdrawing them slightly. It may have been imagination, produced by a little sweetened water pleasantly flavored; it may have been the perfume of the violets. Whatever it was, then their lips met Dr. Pulsifer's they was proved—love had been kindled.

"I have the prescription. I'll order a cask of it." There was no fear that the flame. having been kindled, would cease to burn. Indeed, it became a conflagration, which burned itself out only when the honeymoon had waned to a crescent thread, and it left live coals that glowed with all the steadiness of

A Very Raw Recruit Who Got a Very Warm Reception.

HIS CLASH WITH "OLD BULL."

After the Quite Informal Introduction to the Colonel Was Effected the Tables Turned and "Corporal Suds" Got a Dose of His Own Medicine

General E. V. Sumner, who was long olonel in command of the "Fighting Seventh" cavalry, was known to the rank and file of his regiment as "Old Bull." His gruff manners may have had something to do with the nickname, but it came to him fairly by inheritance. His father, General Sumner, bore it before him.

When the Seventh was stationed at Fort Grant, Arizona, a very raw recruit was sent on from Kansas City. As usual, the men persecuted him from the start. He returned meekly from the ordnance stores with the information that "left handed ramrods" were all gone; without batting an eyelash he reported that the sergeant in charge of the post exchange swore at him when he applied for his "butter checks." They took his last two bits away from him in the canteen in some hocus pocus game. After supper he was "blanket tossed" until the arms of the tossers grew weary, and three times that night his bunk collapsed amid roars of merriment. The recruit then gave up the struggle and lay shivering upon the floor until morning. He neither murmured nor complained. In fact, he seemed to be so unsophisticated that when he asked his room corporal where he could have some washing done the corporal, with a jerk of his thumb, indicated the commanding officer's house on the corner of the parade. "Go over to that big house," the corporal directed. "Take your bundle with you and ask for Old Bull. He takes in all the washin' at Grasping his little bundle, the green lad from Kansas City shambled across the parade, mounted the colonel's front stoop and innocently pulled the doorbell. The joke was an old one, as Old love any particular girl. That was ri- Bull had never been known to answer the bell in person, and more than one hard to believe. Taxes not paid to the county treasurer on or before September 15th, 1914, at 4 o'clock, p. m., will be given into the hands of a collector, when 5 per cent. will be added for collection as per Act of Assembly.

"Don't know, Maybe you'll dream who should step out but Old Bull himof the one you are to fall in love with self, booted and spurred for his morn-

"What do you want here?" he thundered, surprised to see an enlisted man

"I_I_I wanted to see about gettin' these sh-shirts and socks done up, love, and Dick said he had no special m-mister," stammered the frightened desire either. Dolly was very curious recruit. "They told me to come over here and ask for Old Bull," he added. "Well, I'm Old Bull!" roared the colonel. "You come along with me and point out the man that sent you over here," he went on as he grasped the astonished youth and hurried him toward the troop quarters. The crowds upon the verandas melted away as Colonel Sumner approached, but the guilty corporal was found lurking in the troop barber shop. Some heated language ensued and then at the end of the painful interview Old Bull delivered himself thus:

"Corporal, I ought to have you court martialed. I could have your stripes taken away and see that you got about thirty days into the bargain or I could have you fined. But you've been one of my best noncoms. You're always sober and a good shot, and so I'm not going to take your chevrons, your liberty or your money away from you. But since you're such an expert on laundry matters I order you to do this man's washing on the front porch of these quarters every Monday morning at guard mount.

"And you, he bellowed, turning to he felt. He did so, anticipating a lot the recruit and shaking his gauntlets at him, "you see that you have at least two suits of underclothes and seven pairs of socks for him every week. And if he don't wash 'em clean you report to Old Bull, that's me!"

And thereafter for several months "Well?" repeated Dick. It is a solid looking, rather slimy, fleshy body, varying in color from light grayish yellow through a range of browns to black and in form it is cup shaped, spheroidal or cake shaped, according to the species, its age or the environ ment in which it grew. In general, in appearance and consistency and the manner in which it cuts with a knife, a living sheep's wool sponge is not unlike a piece of beef liver perforated with holes and canals. The sponge of the markets is merely the skeleton, the supporting framework which gives strength and form to the soft, gelatinous tissue of the living animal.

We Expect to See You

Some Day you are going to come here—that we know.
For some day you will realize that we would not repeat the story of superb values so often were they not really just what we say.
We know that it is hard to break old ties—but after all there is no sentiment in dollars, and it's dollars you spend when you buy clothes, hats or furnishing goods. So, come here now, don't let the time get farther off when you say "I wish I'd come to you before."
For that is what you are going to say, sooner or later.
Safe to say, once you have been here and seen the values we offer in our Hart, Schaffner and Marx, and Fashion Clothes—our Hats our Furnishings—you will become a steady patron—as so many have before you. And it is STEADY patrons that we want to have for this business of ours.

DON'T WAIT; DON'T PUT IT OFF.
