Hit and Miss Typographical Horrors

Biller and Musolinii form a duo who are probably more unpopular today in the eyes of other nations than any other two men in world affairs. That they deserve the criticism which they are receiving is a matter of opinion, but what good can come from this criticism? Do editorial rantings diminish one whit the power of armed units? Who among the multitude of congressmen can check on the advancing tide of military power? Can blustering attacks by statesmen stay for a moment the forward progress of an ambitious nation controlled states today.

In fact, dictator-baiting has become almost a Fujiyama Flashes by Campus. Hitler and Mussolini form a duo who are probably more unpopular today in the eyes of other nations than any other two men in world affairs.
