WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

The Little Log Church.

There was born in the heart of the woods a tree that was a wonder. It is not now, nor was at the time of its birth, in a metropolitan city of twenty million or even at the center of a busy town. It was not near a road that has become a highway. It stood in the forest, a hundred feet from the nearest path that winds among the trees.

The young tree was seven, and the wise old man who knew all the secrets of the woods was there to see it. The wise old man was a jackal, and he was not only wise but also very old. He had watched many generations of trees grow, and he had learned much from them.

The jackal watched as the young tree grew taller and taller, reaching for the sky. He watched as its branches spread out, forming a canopy that shaded the ground below. He watched as the leaves changed color with the seasons, turning from green to yellow to red.

The jackal was amazed at the strength and beauty of this young tree. It was a wonder, a marvel, a testament to the power of nature. The jackal knew that this tree would stand for many years to come, a symbol of the strength and resilience of the forest.

And so, the wise old jackal watched as the young tree grew taller and taller, reaching for the sky. He watched as its branches spread out, forming a canopy that shaded the ground below. He watched as the leaves changed color with the seasons, turning from green to yellow to red.
