LET THERE BE LIGHT

College courses are instituted for the purpose of helping to fit a person for some definite walk of life. A student, if he so desires, can find something somewhere, in some educational institution, instruction for almost any vocational endeavor which he intends to pursue after graduation. But there is one phase of life after graduation which has been, until recently, almost universally ignored in colleges, which is, in our minds, every bit as important as a vocation, and that is marriage. Why, one may ask, should a college have a marriage course? Is not it not enough, one may ask, that the young man and woman enter into a vocational endeavor which he intends to pursue after graduation. (Mel) Koontz, the world-famous animal trainer, was in town last week to promote his new show, "The Greatest Show on Earth". Koontz, who has performed in circuses and on television, is known for his ability to train and perform with wild animals. His latest act involves a full-grown lion, which he trains to dance, sing, and even play a musical instrument.

Garrett Bronze, the lion, is a stunning specimen and is a favorite of Koontz's audience. The act is a testament to Koontz's skill and the unique bond he shares with his animals.

"I'll say it makes a difference to me what cigarette I smoke"

Says Mel Koontz to PENN PHILLIPS

"I grew up in the country, and my family were farmers. We grew our own tobacco, and I always enjoyed the aroma of it. When I started performing in circuses, I was always aware of the quality of tobacco used, and I knew that the best tobaccos came from the finest growers."

"When you smoke a cigarette, you're not just putting something in your mouth, you're connecting with a tradition. Camels is the cigarette I know really well. My family has been farming tobacco for generations, and I know that the tobacco used in Camels is of the highest quality."

"Camel's is the cigarette that's right for me. It's a natural choice, and I know that it's going to give me the best taste."

"I've always been a believer in the power of tradition. Camels is a classic brand, and it represents something that's been around for a long time. It's not just a cigarette, it's a way of life."

Mel Koontz and Penn Phillips got to talking about the subject of cigarettes, and they both agreed that Camels was the perfect choice for the honest, straightforward smoker.
