The fall side of Wood, which is to be found on the old road, is a pleasant place to visit. The young girl, when she first saw the house, was charmed with its beauty, and the old woman who lived in the house was as kind as a mother. The young girl, however, was not the only one who admired the house. The old woman, who was the owner of the house, was also charmed with its beauty, and she was so happy to find a place where she could live in peace and quiet.

The scene was a beautiful one, with the sun shining brightly, and the air was warm and refreshing. The young girl and the old woman walked hand in hand, and they talked and laughed together, enjoying each other's company.

A HALLOWE'EN ROMANCE.

By J. H. Burkett,

October was going out in a blaze of glory. The air was warm and heavy, and the sun had set in the west, leaving a golden path across the sky. The young girl walked down the street, her heart full of joy, for she knew that the last day of the month was Hallowe'en, and she was looking forward to the festivities.

A few minutes later, she met a young man who was also out walking. He was a tall, dark figure, with piercing eyes and a stern expression. He looked at the young girl, and she felt a shudder run through her body. She was not sure why, but she knew that there was something strange about him. She turned to walk away, but he caught her by the arm and pulled her back.

"Where are you going, little girl?" he asked, his voice low and menacing.

The young girl tried to pull away, but he held her tightly. She struggled and screamed, but he did not let go. At last, she gave up and tried to calm herself.

"I'm just walking down the street," she said, trying to sound as though she was not afraid.

"But you're not supposed to be out after dark," he said, his voice growing louder. "Hallowe'en is a time for evil spirits, and you're not to be seen unless you're carrying a lantern.

The young girl felt a wave of panic wash over her. She had not thought of the danger of the night, and now she was alone with this strange man. She tried to think of something to say, but nothing came to her.

Suddenly, the man let go of her arm and stepped back. "I'm sorry," he said, his voice软化了. "I didn't mean to scare you. I just wanted to make sure you were safe.

The young girl felt relieved. She thanked him and continued on her way, feeling grateful for his attention.

In the end, the young girl learned to be more cautious, and to always be aware of her surroundings. She knew that Hallowe'en was a time of danger, and she made sure to stay safe.
