The February number came out last month. The greater number of the articles, which gave in a few words a general idea of the commercial and social life of the country, are noticeably short and well written. The local literature is excellent. The second number contained a few pages which were not as good as the first. The third number was chiefly devoted to a story of the old days, and the fourth number contained a number of poems and a story of the old days also.

The climate throughout the territory is warm and dry, and the air is almost always refreshing. The soil is very fertile, and the crop season is long. The climate has a decided influence on the people's mood and health. The air instead of being dry is almost always moist, and the air instead of being cool is always warm. The climate is very favorable for agricultural purposes. The climate is very favorable for agricultural purposes. The climate is very favorable for agricultural purposes.

DOMESTIC

- The gentleman who says of his cat that it is a "tank of water" has failed to observe the facts of life. A cat is a small animal that can be easily carried in a pocket, but a "tank of water" is a much larger vessel that would require a considerable effort to carry. The phrase "tank of water" is often used to describe something large and heavy, but in this context it seems to be a misnomer. The cat may indeed be able to carry a constant supply of water, but it cannot be considered a "tank of water."
