GOVERNMENTAL SEIZURE OF COAL MINES.

There is some indication that governmental intervention may be invoked to end the coal mining tieup. Such intervention is reported to be under way in the Senate at Washington, with Republican and Democratic Senators supporting the movement. Senator Norris, Republican, in discussing the coal situation said:

"It is a question of life or death, raised by the strike. The American people will freeze next winter unless something is done very soon to end the strike. Besides being a tremendous danger to humanity, the strike is slowly paralyzing business and eventually will cripple our transportation systems. If no other remedy is offered to end this strike within a reasonable time, I will try to get a resolution passed in the Senate to authorize the President to seize the

There already has been too much indifference and delay in the matter of applying means to end the coal strike. Considering the danger to human life that will surely arise if the resumption of mining coal is deferred until after next winter sets in, there should be no further delay in compelling a settlement of the differences between the mine owners and operators, and the miners. The issue can be justly determined by the application of the principles of simple justice to all concerned—mine owners, operators, and miners. If such determination is not consummated, it will be because of the impotency and cowardice of those who have been chosen to protect the rights of all the people-including the right (and the opportunity) to buy coal at a fair price to keep themselves from freezing to death. The patience of the people in putting up with extortionate coal prices and, at times with the dangerous scarcity of an absolutely necessary commodity, will become exhausted, in the presence of great discomfort and of imminent danger to human lives; and then a spirit of just vengeance may be exerted in such manner as will command attention and prompt consideration and action on the part of the governmental authorities at Washington. But why wait until a crisis comes? Why not make the coming impossible?

THE CRITICISM OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

The press, in its criticisms of public officials, frequently exhibits undue haste and inaccuracy. This is in part due to newspaper competition in the matter of rushing more or less sensational stuff into print. However, without the watchful attention and criticism of the press the public interests would soon suffer very much more than they are suffering now. President Harding has resented naturally, rarely retires till dawn.the publication of criticisms reflecting on members of his cabinet, first emanating from members of Congress. If members of Congress openly assail cabinet officers, it is quite foolish for the President to expect newspaper reporters not to give publicity to such incidents. There is no known way of preventing Congressmen from indulging in hot air tirades, warranted or not by facts, and there is no way of preventing newspapers from reporting Congressional speeches. The President had better direct more of his attention to Congressmen, and beg them to stick to facts. Some of them need attention, because of their sensational recklessness of speech.

PINCHOT'S CANDIDATE DEFEATED.

The regular organization forces of the Republican party defeated Gifford Pinchot's candidate, Gen. Asher Miner, for chairman of the state committee, and elected W. Harry Baker, of Harrisburg, by a vote of 81 to 32. Joseph R. Grundy, of Bucks county, prevented the adoption of a motion to make Baker's election unanimous. It thus appears that while Mr. Pinchot was strong enough with Republican voters to win a Gubernatorial nomination he was not so potent as to be able to win out in the selection of a chairman of the Republican state committee—because the Vare-Sproul-Pepper combination in reality continues to represent a major part of the old Republican organization in the State—the organization that was supposed to have been smashed to smithereens a little while ago!

PENNSYLVANIA STATE UNIVERSITY?

President John M. Thomas, of the Pennsylvania State College, has officially announced the beginning of a movement to raise a fund of $2,000,000 among alumni and friends for the erection of health and welfare buildings and to change the institution's name to that of the Pennsylvania State University. This dual program has been determined upon in order to give the institution ample facilities for meeting the demands which are being made upon it by the youth of the Commonwealth, and to provide instruction of university grade to all young Pennsylvania men and women who wish to enter. Every state to the West now has a State University such as is proposed for this Commonwealth.

State College now has an enrollment of 3,200 students, and is obliged to deny admission each year to about 1000 other qualified applicants because of lack of facilities and equipment. Almost onehalf of the annual rejections are for admission to the school of engineering, which now has 1180 students and is the largest in the college

The $2,000,000 fund will be utilized in the erection of immediately needed residences for boys and girls, for physical education | churned into butter by the rolling buildings for young men and women, for a hospital, a Students Union or social hall and a Varsity Hall. Because of the lack of these structures, the authorities are handicapped in caring for the present student body.

In the present frame building that serves as a hospital at the college, there are only eight beds to serve the students and a faculty of about 500 persons.

Authorization of the campaign for expansion of college facilities was first given in January by the Board of Trustees and by the Alumni Association. The campaign committee named an Executive Committee of which President Thomas is chairman. Preliminary organization plans have been adopted and actual work will be begun in the fall. This decision has received the enthusiastic endorsement of the Penn State alumni clubs in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New York, Chicago, Washington, Buffalo, Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit, and a score of other cities.

Advocates of a change in name from the State College to that of the State University declare it would simply be recognition of the present size and scope of instruction at Penn State. Only one other institution in the country of an equal number of students and none with the extensive courses of Penn State still bears the name of college. This movement has brought forth the approval of the State Education Association, the State Chamber of Commerce, the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, scores of civic organizations, business graups such as the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions Clubs, and farmers organizations.

BEST FOOD FOR THE BRAIN

Not Fish, but Bananas and Bacon, Is the Dictum Laid Down by the Best Authorities.

There was once a popular notion that a fish diet was especially good for the brain, but science exploded that idea long ago. As a matter of fact, the phosphorus in fish does service to the joints and not to the head. The one merit that fish possesses is that it is easily digested and blood is not therefore drawn from the brain to aid the digestive organs. By an alliterative coincidence the three things which physicians say are best for the brain are bunanas, bacon and brushes. Bananas have that in them which directly feeds the gray matter of the brain. Their content of sugar, too, is excellent. Sugar, in any form, is energizing to the body, and as brain and body are closely allied anything which reduces bodily fatigue helps the brain. Mental workers know the heavy mental strain of working when the body

Bacon is said to be a good food for the brain worker because pork intices he imagination. A well-known writer of exciting stories confesses that his inspiration comes from pork chops.

So-bacon for the brain. There remains the brush. Probably nine persons out of ten scratch their heads when they feel a sort of temporary held-up in the action of their rains. That is nature's stimulus to the gray matter. Rub your head and you bring the blood to the excited part. That is what your brain needs-more blood. Hence the vigorous use of a stiff-bristled brush will, by exciting the scalp, bring blood to the brain and reinvigorate it.

So if you are a busy brain-worker, ry bananas, bacon, and a brush,-Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Londoners Go to Bed Early. How early we go to bed in London is shown by a census of underground passengers. The last trains in various directions carried respectively 45, 18, 19 and 25 passengers. So hard are our war habits to cast off. Art and Money Making. The old theory that when art turns to making money, either to satisfy need or to gratify desire, it is near young people who have determined to devote their life to art mistrust the "world's coarse thumb" and the judgment of those who pay money for things that please them. The first thing for any young artist or writer to understand is that he must have something to say that will appeal to ordinary human beings. Playing the Game

By MINNIE M. TOWNSEND

It was Saturday, the day of days to the members of the Crane family. For was not that the day when the local | to his side high school team played football and wasn't their Jim one of the stars on said team? As usual, Jim hurried off | zically up into his astonished eyes. directly after dinner to the athletic Dozens of pretty things, years unsaid, his mother not to get his neck broken, and gay encouragement from his father to "give 'em a couple of touchdowns today." Sister Betty hustled | day. Watch him practice, and he's through her dessert to join a crowd of gay high school rooters, resplendent in fluttering school colors. And then Jim's father laid aside his newspaper and went in quest of his over-

Mrs. Crane, still in morning house dress, glanced up from the silverware she was polishing. "Going to the game, Pa?"

"Wouldn't miss it." He hesitated a moment, and then asked in a casual way: "Why don't you come along, too Ma?" He knew it was a useless question, and yet there was an eager, wistful light in his eyes. To see Jim make a touchdown, with mother in the grandstand beside him, was a joy too far-fetched to ever become a reality. "Come on, Ma, be a sport," he coaxed again, but Mrs. Crane shook her head carelessly. "I've got dozens of things to do this afternoon, Jim." "Let 'em go, or do them tonight," he persisted. "No," decisively, "I don't understand the game, anyway. I wouldn't know touchdown from a forward pass." "I'd explain things as they hap-ened, Mary.' "No, it would only be a waste of time and money. You can tell me all about it when you return." Disconsolately Jim's dad left the house and joined the crowds that surged toward the field. It bothered him to think that Mary just wouldn't hold tasks to join him in anything except, perhaps, an occasional movie. And then the game was on, and for the time being Crane, Sr., forgot his domestic troubles. The teams were well matched, and fought gamely through three scoreless quarters. The final quarter started with a flourish and the visiting team plowed through the local team for a touchdown. They failed to kick the goal, The score was six to nothing, and only seven minutes left to play.

One, two three downs and then, suddenly, out of an apparently solid mass, slid the slim figure of Jim Crane. The crowd arose to its feet as though by a signal. The visitors seemed dazed at the turn of affairs. One made frenzied grab at the boy, but it only served to wrench his shoulder. The ball remained coddled against his side. Amid a wild burst of applause, Jimsey carried the ball back of the line. On moment remained in which the ball was kicked over successfully, and the score stood 7 to 6 in favor of the home team. The whistle pealed shrilly. They bore Jim home on stalwart shoulders. Jim, Sr., heard them talking about his son all the way home, but he alone, with a heart bursting with pride, had no one to confide in. The supper table was merely an adoration party composed of Betty's friends. One gay young miss turned suddenly to Mrs. Crane and inquired how she had liked the game. Mrs. Crane had laughed carelessly: "Oh, I never go, dear; too many things to do

The young lady in question stared as only the modern young person can. "You don't go? Why, mother never misses a game. Bert is only a sub, and is seldom used, but ma says she wants to be there when he does play. She knows all about the game, and can tell me a few things, believe me."

Later on, when the family had dispersed for the evening, Mrs. Crane sat down and began, not to work on the ever present embroidery, but to think. She recalled an editorial she had recently read. One sentence stood out clearly: "To attend a ball game with hubby may mean more to be of an immaculate house.'

happiness than the frenzied dusting Another week passed as usual, to the red letter day. They did not notice that Ma was dressed for the street, an unusual thing at noon, on a Saturday. She hovered about them, restless, unbusy fingers fairly aching to tackle the dinner dishes. Jim, Sr., put on his coat, fussed a bit with the clothes brush, mumbled a careless good-by and was off. He had not even staring at the closed door, hot tears of disappointment trickling down her cheeks. She had dreamed of what he | that will tempt you; etc. would say when she replied to his usual question, "Sure I'll go; wait till I

VIRTUE MATTER OF LOCALITY

Standards Differ According to Whether One Lives in the City or the Country.

In the great open spaces virtue is more or less of a local issue. The man who gets drunk on a mountain top offends nobody but himself. Here or for home buildings consult in New York the neighbors hear abou

All the tests of virtue are rigorous for folk who live elbow to elbow with nothing between them but partitions of little old last year's wallpaper and a thin dab of plaster. If the man is ter of fact, he is not likely to do so. because he thinks twelve o'clock is late, and often annoys our guests by apping on the steampipes. However, all this is irrelevant. If he gave us a haracter it would be won in spite of the closest possible scrutiny. The things which the neighbors think about Farmer Jones are not half so important. He lives ten miles up the road around the bend. At that distance almost anybody might look good. Perhaps he seems less amiable to Mrs. Jones, but nobody would think of asking a farmer's wife for an opinion about anything. Farmer Jones is under no necessity of cultivating manners, because he can be as rude as he pleases, and it will pass for downright native frankness. To his horses he is privileged to talk even more freely. And, speaking of horses, according to our city standards, Farmer Jones would very probably be set down, or set up, as a swindler. In his community they merely laugh and call him a shrewd man for horse trading.-Heywood Broun, in Judge.

Where Becky Sharp Lived. Careful students of Thackeray have been amused at the identification of the house of Becky Sharp with a little house near Shepherd's market, a little house, with only one window on the ground floor and an area. This is contrary to the generally accepted house in Curzon street. It measures four stories and a bit, and, while it is very narrow, as compared with its height, it has a certain distinction, especially about the front door, which would, no doubt, appeal to Becky. "A very small, comfortable house in Curzon street" was Thackeray's description, and after that your true lover of Thackeray will refuse to surrender to anything near Shepherd's market !-Christian Science Monitor.

Childish Frankness. Charles, with his father and mother, vas spending the day at the home of his grandparents. When he had finished his dinner he excused himself, as he wished to play with his toys. Upon being prompted to say "Thank you, grandma," he seriously added, "Good dinner—and good supper, too. I hone."

The Library Pest. You get a book out of the library, and notice that some other reader has improved on the author by underscoring the printed text or penciled notes in the margin. Occasionally these show intense interest and deep thought. But librarians say most of the "improvements" are changes in punctuation. Some folks are so busy looking for other people's mistakes that they haven't any time for their own.

RECORD OF A MILKING SHORTHORN. From the New York Herald. Milking shorthorns are becoming popular with those who are in search of double purpose cattle. They furnish an abundance of good milk, and when fatening for the market are classified as prime beeves. Those who have specialized in the type have found it profitable. That was markedly the case with a Canadian farmer who began with a single heifer which he bought for $100. From that young cow and her descendants more than $25,000 was remaid and she was the property of S A. Moore, of Caledonia, Ontario, which is in a fruit and dairy country An original man is one who does not | not more than 50 miles from Buffalo Mr. Moore was a farmer in ordin ary circumstances, tilling 100 acres of land, in 1908, when he bought Dairymaid because she had the qualities he admired in a dairy cow. She came from a good family. Mr. Moore had his own ideas of type, and he bred to perpetuate it. He died in 1919, and his widow sold recently 32 head of picked for the service because of his Dairymaid's descendants for almost very flat feet, which enable him to $15,000. Her husband had disposed of $10,000 worth of stock during his lifetime, besides the produce from the

> The fact that Dairymaid herself, looking as fit as the proverbial fiddle at the age of 13, was included in the lot sold, shows the rapid increase possible in a herd and gives force to the appeal that stock raising has for those who will give it the benefit of close attention.

The money you pay for clothes ought to get several important things.

Not style alone; not merely "look good when new." Long service is one of the things you pay for. And style isn't much if the clothes don't keep shape and look stylish after you wear them a few weeks.

Weitzenkorn's clothes are reasonably priced and made for service; of fine fabrics, tailored to keep shape. You ought never to wear any others.
