ELECTION RESULTS

A relatively light vote was cast on Tuesday in this and other sections of Montgomery county. At this writing, Wednesday morning, election returns from a number of States indicate large Democratic gains and numerous Democratic victories. The Republican majority in Congress will be greatly reduced.

Gifford Pinchot is elected Governor of Pennsylvania by a majority of about 150,000.

In New Jersey Governor Edwards, Democrat, was elected U. S. Senator over Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, by a large majority. Judge Sizer, Democrat, is elected Governor over former Senator Runyon.

Alfred E. Smith, Democrat, was elected Governor of New York, defeating the present Governor, N. L. Miller, by a heavy majority.

The indications are that U. S. Senator Lodge is defeated in Massachusetts.

FOOTBALL

Collegeville High School outclassed Spring City High in a very one-sided game on the home field, Saturday afternoon. Collegeville scored almost at will, crossing Spring City's goal line in every period. The final score was 40 to 0. Spring City displayed good football individually, aside from two costly "bonehead" plays, but their teamwork was miserable. Collegeville on the other hand showed splendid teamwork. The line was very strong on the defense. The opposing backfield men met a stone-wall at almost every attempted line-back. The few first downs the visitors did get were made by end runs or forward passes. The local backfield exhibited a smashing offensive every time the signal was in their possession. The line plunging of Muche was very good. Large gains were made every time he carried the ball. Waldo showed up best on end runs, while Rahm and Johnson pulled off several of the forward passes—Rahm to Sterner—two of which were directly responsible for touchdowns. The team was without the services of their star halfback, Garrett, due to fractured ribs.

The manager has several games pending but the next game that is definitely scheduled will be with Sellersville at home on Saturday, November 25. Sellersville will undoubtedly be the toughest proposition the local eleven has met thus far. Newspaper reports claim Sellersville to be among the strongest football teams in the North Penn section.

Building construction, $2,560,100; tax, $244,400; slaughtering and meat packing, $2,390,800; candy, $49,900; bread and bakery products, $1,991,900; cereals, $951,600; rubber, tires and tubes, $9,517,400; planing mill products, $1,252,700; pulp miscellaneous products, $2,562,800; cigars, $5,700,000; asbestos products, $4,927,600; flags, banners, etc., $658,200; magnetic products, $2,079,700.

Of the total value of the products of Montgomery county last year, products having a value of $68,005,500 were shipped to points outside of Pennsylvania according to the records of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs.

In making public the report on Montgomery county and the three municipalities, Secretary of Internal Affairs Woodward pointed out that the report indicated that it had kept pace with the balance of the State last year. He added also that there are many additional detail figures in the Department of Internal Affairs which will be of interest to the business, men and civic organizations of the community and that he was ready at all times to co-operate with persons interested in making available any of these statistics which may be of value to the community.

DEDICATION OF NEW SCHOOL BUILDING AT OAKS.

On Saturday, November 11, 1922 at 2 p. m., the new public school building at Oaks, Upper Providence township, will be dedicated, and the important local event will be characterized by appropriate exercises. The new, attractive and substantial school building reflects the interest and aggressiveness of the Upper Providence school district. It also reflects credit upon the School Directors who authorized and superintended its construction. H. C. Shattross, of Graterford, furnished the material and aided the constructive work. The new building affords largely increased educational facilities and in a measure solves the problem of concentrated public school work, which will necessitate the abandonment of the old buildings known as the Quaker and Green Tree schools.

The program for the dedicatory exercises, Saturday afternoon, follows: Prayer, Rev. Cresson; music; Presentation of Flag and Bible by Wayne Council, No. 46, O. of I. A.; Address, Hon. J. Whitaker Thompson; Music; Address, A. H. Hendricks, Esq.; Exercises of School Children; Address of special guests; Presentation of public schools; Music; Closing, Rev. H. S. Replogle. The Directors of the district are: President, David Rittenhouse; Vice-President, I. C. Landes; Treasurer, Frank Murray; Secretary, S. H. Umstead; Warren Gotwals.

EVANSBORO

After the first month of school, the Principal, Mr. J. Scott Port, resigned and Mrs. Dyson, the former principal, was engaged, temporarily to supply the vacancy. Now the School Board has secured the services of Mr. I. Teas as principal and he assumed the duties of that office on Tuesday morning. Mr. Teas comes with high testimonials of former efficient service and he will find as his associates one of the most efficient, enthusiastic and well-beloved group of teachers in Montgomery county.

The Girls' Club will meet this afternoon, (Thursday) at the rectory.

Mrs. Charles F. Scofield and Mrs. Edward Longaker are attending an all day meeting of the Diocesan Women's Auxiliary in Philadelphia.

The members of St. James' Guild will give a soured supper at the parish house on Friday night, November 17, from 6.30 to 7.45 o'clock. This will be followed by an illustrated lecture on Panama.

The sermon on Christian citizenship, preached last Sunday in St. James' church, attracted wide notice, being reported in the Norristown Herald and commented on in the Philadelphia papers.

St. James' Church Notes

Servises Sunday, morning prayer and sermon, 10.30 o'clock. Subject: "Why the Armistice Failed to Bring Peace." Evening service at 7.30 o'clock. The rector will continue his series of studies of the life of David at this service.

Trains Crashed—Two Killed.

As a result of a wreck on the Trenton cut-off railroad near Norristown last night, Thursday, I. H. Cabell, engineer, and William Lafever, brakeman, both of Harrisburg, were killed, and J. W. Powers also of Harrisburg, a fireman, was badly injured and is in the hospital at Norristown. The two men met their death from scalds sustained when the steam pipes were torn from the locomotive. The cause of the wreck was the sidwiping of a train leaving a siding, by a fast freight going in the same direction.

OUTPUT OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY INDUSTRIES

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 3.—Montgomery county industries in 1921 turned out products having a value of $136,347,900, according to figures made public today by Secretary of Internal Affairs James F. Woodward, following the completion of an industrial survey made by the Bureau of Statistics and Information of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs. Of the total value of the products in the county, the industrial output last year in Pottstown was worth $20,508,400; in Norristown the value was $17,674,100; and in Conshohocken the value was $14,481,300. In Montgomery county in 1921 there were 772 industrial establishments which gave employment to 29,028 persons of whom 23,612 were American white, 255 were American colored, and 4,158 were foreigners. Of the total employees 21,788 were males and 7,240 were females.

Industrial workers in the county were paid a total wage of $28,167,390. The entrance of stretcher bearers meant that another comrade had been dragged from an underground sea of gas.

The explosion that left in its trail death and destruction occurred at 7.20 o'clock this morning, shortly after the men had entered the mine. As soon as the miners from neighboring pits could reach the mine preliminary work of rescue began, and it was supplemented later in the day by trained engineers from the United States Bureau of Mines in Pittsburgh and the rescue crews of neighboring mines.

The rescue men all told the same story as they came to the surface. They declared that bodies were scattered here and there for more than 500 feet.

"The sad part of it," said one sturdy miner, "is that at least 20 of the victims were within 100 feet of fresh air when they were overcome by the gas."

Every effort tonight was being made to locate all of the living. As soon as that has been done the work of recovering the dead will commence.

Men, women and children by the score crowded the police lines near the shaft. Many of them had been there since they heard of the explosion early in the day, and there was no indication they would leave their posts until the last body had been brought out.

On the "cot of honor" at the hospital rests a youth of 22. His name is Abe Craig. His coolness saved at least a dozen lives.

"There isn't much to tell," said Craig. "I was wakened at 7 o'clock and started heading No. 10 in the left. A few minutes later there was a crash. I told the boys that meant a cave-in, and we had better get out. Then there was a rush of gas. Luckily our door was open, or the explosion would have knocked it down. I slammed it, and about 25 of us waited to see what would happen."

"From 7.30 until about 2 o'clock we stayed in the chamber. Older men were getting faint. Young fellows were holding out pretty well. Nobody had very much to say. Some of the boys were praying."

"Finally the after-damp worked its way around and under the door. There was only one thing to do. I told them to wait until we could make a run for it. We opened the door and ran down the heading. It was a tough dash, stumbling over bodies. We began to choke. Some of the boys fell, but those of us who had any fight left kept on."

"We ran into fallen rock between the seventh and ninth headings. That probably was where the explosion took place."

"I had a hunch that if we got to the sixth heading we would get fresh air, but you can believe me that the last hundred yards was something awful. Coughing and strangling, we kept on, and finally I ran slap-bang into the air. I was dizzy, but I screamed to the boys. Most of them who got to the sixth heading keeled over."

"Then I heard men coming and I knew they were rescuers. They got us out. Only the young men made it. I am afraid all the older men lost their lives."

Rescue forces were made up of skilled miners from Spangler and vicinity in charge of engineers from the United States Bureau of Mines and the mine rescue crew of the Cambria Steel Company which arrived here early this afternoon. They worked unceasingly in short relays, bratticing the workings so as to control the gas and admit the pure air from shafts.

Other volunteers gathered the dead and injured which were scattered in the workings not far from the foot of the shaft. The dead were placed in a subterranean room and the injured, swathed in blankets, were taken to the surface. There a first aid station had been established by Spangler physicians and the Spangler Chapter of the American Red Cross. They were reinforced later in the day by 10 Red Cross nurses from Johnstown.

CHILDREN FIRED STRAW STACK—BARN DESTROYED

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 6.—Children playing with matches near the straw stack started a blaze this afternoon on the farm of Reuben Weaver, near Centre Church, one mile north of Terre Hill, which completely destroyed the large barn, tobacco shed and hoppen, with all of their contents. The building contained practically all of the season's crops of a 90-acre farm, including 14 acres of tobacco and large quantities of hay and wheat. Three horses, five cows and several pigs perished in the flames. A recently purchased threshing outfit, a tractor and all of the farming implements are a total loss.

TERRIBLE MINE DISASTER—70 MINERS DEAD.

Spangler, Pa., Nov. 6.—Between 70 and 80 miners were killed in the Reilly mine of the Reilly Coal Company, near here, this morning, according to an official estimate made public at midnight by rescue workers and company officials. Exploration of the workings by trained rescuers was being continued tonight. None of the dead had been brought to the surface at 10.30 o'clock.

Thirty blanching survivors—most of them young men—lay on a double row of cots in the Miners' Hospital here tonight, anxiously watching the entrance to the big room. They were the known survivors of the 94 miners who went into the mine this morning a few minutes before a terrific explosion. The exact number of dead was still undetermined, although it was the opinion of trained rescue leaders that between 70 and 80 had lost their lives.

Their vigil began when the first eight were brought to the hospital. The entrance of stretcher bearers meant that another comrade had been dragged from an underground sea of gas.

END OF A SENSATIONAL COURT TRIAL.
Mrs. Catharine Rosier, charged with the murder of her husband Oscar Rosier and of his stenographer Mildred Reckett, was acquitted and given her freedom on Friday, in a Philadelphia court room. During the progress of the trial the court room was crowded with spectators, many of whom evidenced much emotional interest in the proceedings and gave vent to indications of approval and disapproval, as the testimony veered back and forth from unfavorable to favorable, respecting the defendant. All of which was entirely discreditable to a Court of Justice. The finding of the jury was in harmony with the emotionalism of the crowd in the court room; of those who should not have been permitted to be present. It is a travesty on justice and common decency to permit criminal court proceedings to become centres of attraction for the morbidly curious and emotional. The action of the jury in saving the murderer from the electric chair was no doubt in keeping with the evidence presented, as a whole, but not to have found her sufficiently guilty and dangerous to be confined in a jail, or in an asylum, shows that the jury failed in the performance of its whole duty.

THE TREND—
The trend of the times is toward all manner of sensationalism, multifarious and ruinous extravagances, an increase in murders, divorces, indecencies in "high life" and "low life"; toward a greater disregard for common honesty. Because Joseph Krauskopf, the eminent Jewish rabbi of Philadelphia, sees and talks about much that is going on in the United States, he is charged with looking through "blue goggles." However, his contention that present day civilization is diseased and must be cured if it is not to altogether collapse, is supported by many other observers of human affairs. There is being much said about the necessity of a revival of the religious spirit (whatever that may mean) to remedy existing human ills, weaknesses, and shortcomings. What appears to be most needed is a revival, or increase, of sanity and common sense; a revival or increase of simple justice and its application. Quite an assortment of centuries-old panaceas have been tried over and over again. Popularly and extensively tried, too. Now witness the "mess." Until there is a lessening in potency of the influence of absolutely false claims, pretenses, shams, foggy thinking, cant, hypocrisy, and of the disposition to reform mankind by edicts promulgated by assumptions middle-heads, and of the enactment of all manner of laws for the purpose of reforming mankind, civilization will have to take its chances, with some odds against it. Meanwhile, a host of self-assumed saviors—by creedal processes—of mankind might well take a prolonged vacation for the purpose of reflecting upon helpful evidence arising from the study of a number of the well-established fundamental facts of human existence, which do not, and never will, harmonize with claims easily proved to be false.

A QUESTION CONSIDERED.
Editor Maginley, of the Norristown Times, somewhat concerned about Dr. S. D. McConnell, the New York clergyman who has renounced the creeds of Christianity, enquires: "Is the church code worn out?" Judging from his observations aent the question raised, Editor Maginley has reference to the moral "code" of the church. In so far as the moral code of the church is sound to the core, in so far as it is rooted in the universal experiences of mankind as expressed by rightful human action, for the sake of right, the moral code of the church WILL NOT WEAR OUT, unless civilization goes to smash. It is entirely different with an assortment of church creeds—they have been ever changing, ever since creeds began to be formulated in the brains of men. Some are worn out, others are wearing out. It would seem that while Dr. McConnell may be very suspicious of supernaturalistic theology, he is quite sound as to the code of morality generally recognized by humanity, for very NATURAL reasons. The same code, it is fair to observe, is recognized by the church. In the absence of information as to what really constitutes SOUND theology, I am unable to pass judgment respecting Dr. McConnell's unsoundness, theologically. But I am reasonably well assured that Editor Maginley might with much illuminating benefit to himself assimilate some of Dr. McConnell's philosophy.

A MONSTER MARRIED.
That monarchial delinquent, William II, of Germany, wickedly contrived, by the aid of the villainous German diplomats, to cause the world war and, after the sacrifice of millions of human lives and the infliction of indescribable human misery, played the role of a slinking coward and sought refuge under the protection of a neutral government. The German people, themselves, misguided and coerced by the militarism of the Kaiser and his abettors, should have demanded the death or, at least, the complete exile of the ambitious wretch, who is largely responsible for Germany's present plight. The Allies, losing their sense of justice at the close of the war, only winked at the self-protective movements of the deposed delinquent. The other day William II entered into a marriage contract, and manifested much happiness. The big newspapers of the world afforded much space in chronicling the event. Surely, justice is dead, in spots.

WHY EXPECT ANYTHING LESS?
Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, (widely recognized as an authority upon economic questions) denounces the Fordney-McCumber Tariff act, for the following reasons:
1. It will raise the cost of living.
2. Its addition to the cost of living will come on top of a rise which is almost certain to come from other causes any way.
3. It will make it difficult, if not impossible, for America to collect the debts which Europe owes us.
Why expect anything less from a protective tariff? Has there ever been, in the history of the United States, a protective tariff—A TARIFF FOR PROTECTION—that failed to rob ultimate consumers and enrich specially protected favorites?

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.
President Harding has issued a Thanksgiving proclamation designating November 30, 1922, as a day for national thanksgiving.
REAL NICE.

The Ham Sandwich

By I. WRIGHT

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Merwin Palmer straightened up from his cramped position over the engine and rubbed his greasy hands down the tan overalls he wore. "I tell you, Dave," he said, with a sigh, "I'm going up to that house and ask for a drink of water. I need a little something after three hours of this work."

The man lying in the road under the car snorted. "G'wan, then," he retorted shortly. "We're not going to call a garage man in for this little job if it takes all day."

"No, that's all right with me—but I'm going to have a drink of water. And say—if I saw a ham sandwich right now—what I wouldn't do to it!"

"For a civil engineer with a nice, new diploma from college and a pretty fraternity pin that no girl ever yet succeeded in getting away—well, you sound like a hungry tramp." And the man in the road turned over on his side and stretched two fingers up into the motor and said something softly under his breath.

Up at the house on the hill a girl with soft golden hair and violet eyes stood on the porch, watching the progress of the man coming up. "His figure is like Merwin's," she whispered to herself. "But Merwin—" she sighed a little and sat down at the white kitchen table, which was spread with two large loaves of bread, butter, mustard and pretty pink ham.

"May—may I have a drink of water?" asked Merwin Palmer a moment later. "This heat is frightful." The girl with the violet eyes did not look up from her bread cutting. "The pump is there and the dipper is hanging in the apple tree directly above. Help yourself!" Her voice was low and her tone cordial.

As soon as he had turned to go to the pump she looked after him. Afraid of tramps, she was somehow fascinated by his figure—a figure so similar to the college man she had met in the city. His shoulders drooped as he pumped, and he looked very tired. When he called out "Thanks" she was again looking at her bread.

If he stared at her queerly she did not know it, for she was not even glancing his way.

"Maybe tramps are a lazy lot and don't deserve anything," she said half aloud, "but I'll bet a sandwich would taste good to him. Say!" she called out. She did not know how to address him, and "say" seemed to be adequate.

He turned. "Would you care for a ham sandwich?"

He turned and hurried toward her. For a moment she was startled. She had heard dreadful tales of tramps knocking girls senseless and going through the house to take everything of value; she had heard of one place near the next town where a tramp had set fire to the house. She almost regretted her impulse.

"I don't know that you're hungry," she said timidly. He looked so large now that he was coming up the porch steps and in the screen door. "But—I thought a ham sandwich—"

"Why," he said cordially, in a booming voice, "I'd commit murder right now for a ham sandwich. I was just telling my pal down the road that a ham sandwich—"

She paled; he had a pal down the road—she did not dare look at him.

"May I help myself?" he asked as she made no effort to hand him the plate.

She nodded; her throat felt dry and hot and she wished that some of the family were home. "You—you might take one along to your—pal—" she said in a very little voice.

"Fine—" he said, eating the sandwich with great relish. "Although a fellow who swears as he does doesn't deserve anything as good as this. It seems to me that you have met me—" he said, and then stopped short.

Her face flamed; why had she called him back when he was on his way out of the yard! She dared not look at him. Panic overwhelmed her.

"Aren't you Faith Darrow?" he asked.

She looked at him now in surprise.

"Yes."

"I'm—"

"You're never Merwin Palmer?" she gasped.

He nodded placidly. "I'm glad you remembered. I thought you didn't, and—"

She laughed nervously. "Well, why—why didn't you say so at the start? I thought—you—thought you were a tramp—in those clothes—"

He stared at his tan overalls. "The car broke down and Dave and I thought we'd fix it ourselves."

There was a strained silence as each followed thoughts concerning an evening where there was dancing, a balcony, certain words—and then the interruption of a crowd of dancers.

"I know—" it was Merwin Palmer who broke the silence. As he spoke he was unfastening the shoulder strap of his overall, revealing a well-cut suit beneath. "I know, I always had a notion Faith, that my fraternity pin would look better on you than on any one else in the world; suppose we— He was holding out the pin, which had never before been out of his hands.

A snort made them turn around. "So this is what you call getting a drink of water while I lie under that car and sweat!" It was Dave, hot and tired.

"Here's a sandwich and there's the dipper for down the car there, by the pump. G'wan and get a drink," urged Merwin Palmer, with more cordiality than he had ever shown before. "G'wan, we're busy here."

FREAKS OF THE TYPE.

Whoever has visited a printing office, and noted the almost countless numbers of metallic pieces daily handled by the compositor, cannot wonder that typographical errors now and then occur; neither must he deem it remarkable that they are so few.

Such errors may be caused by the use of the wrong letters, the changing of a word, the omission of punctuation marks and in various other ways.

The result is generally amusing to the reader, though frequently calculated to evoke forcible rather than elegant language from the author of the article in which they appear.

His indignation will be somewhat modified, however, if he stops to consider that they may be due to the fact that his bibliography is not much more readily decipherable than hieroglyphics—not to the "blundering stupidity" of the compositor.

"Her chest tones are full and prominent," wrote a critic, concerning a celebrated singer. The compositor and proofreader were not versed in musical nomenclature, and the unfortunate outcome of their ignorance in this direction was: "Her breast bones are full and prominent."

Of a new minister, whose favor he desired to secure for himself, an editor said: "He is a most venerable sample of antiquity." To his consternation, in print it read: "He is a most venerable sample of iniquity."

One line of a poem, dedicated to its author's lady, was, "I kissed her under the stars." His feelings can be better imagined than described, when he saw it transformed into, "I kicked her under the stars."

Another poet intended to say, "See the pale martyr in a sheet of fire!" The types made him say, "See the pale martyr in a shirt of fire!"

"I offer my most respectful thanks to all who have honored me with their patronage," read a dancing master's "card to the public."

"May they always live in peace and harmony," is the way in which a marriage notice should have concluded, but many couples must have felt decidedly uncomfortable when they saw, "May they always live on peas and hominy," in the announcement of their nuptials.

Noticing the applause elicited by the remarks of a speaker at a political meeting in England, a party organ said, "The air was rent with the snouts of three thousand people."

Several years ago Philadelphia paper wished to announce that, "Hon. Mr. — will address the masses at National Hall, this evening." From the misplacement of a space, it read: "Hon. Mr. — will address them asses," etc.

Advertisements furnish many ludicrous mistakes. A prominent mercantile house in New York desired to bring to the knowledge of the public the fact that it had for sale a large quantity of brass hoppers—such as are used in coffee mills. "Brass hoppers" was printed "grass hoppers."

"Old hats made new, while you wait for twenty-five cents," was the advertisement of a repairer of gentlemen's head gear, and the advertiser was greatly surprised when one of his patrons, receiving a hat which had been "made new," said: "I'm in something of a hurry, and will take the quarter now, if you please!"

But an explanation followed, and the "ad" was properly punctuated before it again appeared.

EYES THAT GROW ON STALKS.

Eyes are made to fit their jobs. Crabs and lobsters, which are slow-movers, have eyes on the tips of stalks, so that they can see almost all around them, and thus sight their enemies in plenty of time to escape.

The eyes of snails and slugs are perched on the ends of their feelers, so that they can look in every direction at once.

Rabbits and hares live continually on the alert, so Nature has given them eyes at the sides of the head, enabling them to keep watch with out the trouble of turning round.

Birds, of course, have the same power; they have only to move their necks to see all around them.

Insects have compound eyes—that is, each eye is made up of many eyes, or facets. The eye of the common house-fly has 4,000 of these facets; that of a butterfly having eyes with as many as 25,000 facets. The ant—with all its intelligence—has but fifty facets in each eye.

These compound eyes do not move in their sockets, for the facets give them the power of seeing in all directions at once.

Bird's eyes have an inner lid which acts as a sort of blind or shutter to protect them from the glare of strong sunlight. And the falcon family, in addition, have feathers that arch over the eyes and form a sunshade.

Flat-fish, such as flounders, have traveling eyes. These fish, when young, are exactly the same shape as all the other small fry, with an eye on each side of the head. But as they grow, the bones of the head and face twist round, bringing both eyes to the same side of the head.

Unless eyes are exercised, they soon become useless, just as muscles do. The Mammoth Caves of Kentucky contain many blind fish and other creatures which have lost their sight through living in constant darkness.

PUMPING AN OCEAN DRY.

A wonderful engineering feat is being carried out in Holland. It is nothing less than an attempt to reclaim a large portion of the Zuider Zee.

Where at present fishermen sink their nets, there will rise villages, poplar-bordered roads, and sleepy canals, and new farms and homes for thousands of people.

Holland has always been at war with the sea. More than a third of the total area of the kingdom lies below sea-level, and would be flooded were it not for its dykes and sand dunes.

Indeed, the Zuider Zee itself is a result of the bursting of the dykes. This happened in the thirteenth century, and, in addition to Holland being cut in two, and Friesland being separated from the rest of the country by a large sheet of water, hundreds of villages were submerged and about eighty thousand persons were drowned.

Dutch engineers are building a great dam, or embankment, across the northern end of the sea, from Wieringen, in North Holland, to Piam, in Friesland. It will have a length of about fifteen miles, and will carry a double-line railway and road for ordinary traffic, thus affording a more easy access between North Holland and Friesland. Communication with the North Sea will be maintained by thirty-three large sluice gates and a couple of locks for shipping.

Within this embankment there are four areas, known as the northwestern, southwestern, northeastern, and southeastern. These are to be drained and reclaimed. It will result in adding 827 square miles, an area almost as large as the county of Cornwall, to Holland.

The construction of the embankment alone is expected to occupy nine years, and a sum of £15,000,000 will be expended on the scheme.

USE OF CAMELS IN WARFARE.

In the country where camels live they have been used in battle from very remote times.

In his Egyptian campaign, Napoleon decided in 1798 to create a regiment mounted on dromedaries, to consist of two squadrons of four companies each. The soldiers were to be selected from the infantry, to wear distinctive uniforms, and to be armed with the weapons of the infantry, plus a very long lance. The soldiers were to be mounted on dromedaries of superior speed and endurance. The dromedaries seem to have been easy to train, and no difficulty was incurred in acclimating them to the drum and bagle.

This corps reached a strength of about six hundred men and appears to have been a valuable military force. The usual day's march was about seventy-two miles, and one case is cited of 600 miles in eight days.

The dromedary corps remained in existence about two and a half years. Subsequently similar troops were raised in Algeria, and also in India. The latter force was disbanded in 1853, as it was considered too expensive.

RED CROSS—THE SERIOUS DUTY OF EVERY CHAPTER.

To Officers and Chapters of the American Red Cross: Membership in the Red Cross is both a privilege and a patriotic duty of American citizenship.

Congress created it as the national and international agency of the United States to meet all great emergencies. The demands upon it locally, nationally, and internationally are persistent and insistent by suffering peoples at home and abroad.

The Red Cross Roll Call is our annual call to arms. Every member is expected to stand at attention and respond "ready" and to renew allegiance to the army of service. Only in this way can the work of the Red Cross be done.

There may be a few communities where the officers of Chapters do not recognize their obligation and their duty, but fall or neglect to have this Roll Call. To members of the Red Cross having the spirit of service this is inconceivable, and is like a picket sleeping at his post. That persons in positions of leadership should stand idle when there is so much to do, while other devoted Red Cross men, women and children elsewhere are hard at work, is beyond belief. Such conduct is most inconsiderate and denies to others opportunity for service.

No person should hold an office in a Red Cross Chapter and fail to obey this manifest call of duty.

The Red Cross is an army. Its members constitute this noble army fighting the battle of humanity. It is the army whose badge is service to all mankind; to humanity everywhere of whatever religion, race, color, or creed. If a Chairman, or other Chapter officer, is unwilling to have the Roll Call and afford the public an opportunity of enrolling in this army, resigning should be tendered and some other persons in sympathy with the spirit of the Red Cross should step into the leadership, to the end that the Chapter may take its place and march forward with the army already at work.

The emergency is here. It is now facing the Red Cross at home and abroad. Our own ex-service men and disasters at home are constantly with us. And now, the American Red Cross has responded to the appeal of the President of the United States and has definitely undertaken the work of saving the Christian and other refugees who have been driven by the Turks from Asia Minor into Greece.

There is no room for slackers. Persons who cannot hear this call should aid in finding others who are willing to work and whose hearts respond to the cry of suffering humanity.

APPLICATION FOR TREES.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 6.—Applications for trees for the spring planting season now coming into the Department of Forestry indicate that the movement for the reforestation of waste and denuded lands in Pennsylvania is growing steadily.

Each succeeding year it is brought home to the people of the State, as well as all the country at large, with increasing force that the only way of a timber supply in the future lies in new forests, produced either artificially or naturally.

In order to make forests more attractive as an investment, the State is spending large sums to protect them from fire, and to-day its system of forest fire protection has been pronounced by the U. S. Forest Service to be the best among the States.

To date the number of applications for young forest trees is far more than for the corresponding period last year. Land owners in all parts of the State have applied for trees in large quantities that the entire supply, about 4,000,000 trees, will be exhausted by the end of the year.

Land owners in all parts of the State have applied for trees in large quantities that the entire supply, about 4,000,000 trees, will be exhausted by the end of the year.

The Department of Forestry has, however, about 3,000,000 young trees of the following kinds available for planting: Scotch pine, Japanese black pine, white ash, green ash, rock oak and American elm.

These trees are from five to twelve inches in height. They are distributed free to land-owners by the Department of Forestry, and they are to be planted for wood production. They are not suited in size and shape for shade or ornamental planting.

In addition to applications from individuals requests for trees have been received from cities for municipal parks and for watershed reforestation. More applications have come from sportsmen's clubs than ever before, indicating a widespread interest in planting organizations in order to protect and preserve the natural resources of the State.

Water companies and coal mining companies are prominent among the applicants. The former are planning to conserve their water supplies, and the mining companies are planting their surface lands to provide a future supply of timber for their operations.

Crows form "bird cyclone" Peculiar Black Flock Extends From Ground to Elevation of Perhaps Two Thousand Feet.

Crows gathering together near Friday Harbor, Washington, numbers formed a "bird cyclone," the first ever observed in this part of Puget sound, where the species is common and numerous.

The formation is sometimes called by scientists a "wed" or "wed" and they rotate round and round like the circular storm against the sun. The leaders must have been at an elevation of 2,000 feet, where they flew in constantly widening circles while the birds were just clearing the tree tops.

From the ground to the highest the black funnel was made up of crows. The unique formation continued for perhaps an hour, the lower birds gradually sorting themselves out and all were about the same height.

The singular part of this bird circus was the noticeable fact that not a crow was heard while the formation was in air, but once the huge flock had settled on the ground, a tremendous din of demotion reigned, each apparently trying to outdo another.

The congregation of crows in immense flocks occurs every summer toward fall. Their favorite roosts are fir trees near Friday Harbor.

There is one group of buildings in Washington where, within a few minutes' walk, you can find someone to give you intimate details as to what is going on in the know world. It is the Department of Agriculture group.

Dr. E. W. Nelson, chief of biological survey, probed the secrets of ancient Guatemala and then, still a youngster, spent four years in Alaska, in the '70's, and has a big island named for him. Dr. Walker Swingle, citrus fruits, knows China inside out and has a working knowledge of the language.

Dr. H. L. Shantz, chief of plant pathology, recently spent 15 months in interior Africa, while Prof. Silas Mason explored the desert of Sahara for cuttings for American date operations in the Imperial valley. Dr. B. B. Biltz, chief of the plant quarantine office, lingers lovingly over a steaming hotbed that reminds him of a year in Java. Dr. Wilson Poponoe has hunted rare plants throughout South America.

Dr. David Fairchild, chief of plant introduction, has toured practically all of the known world. Dr. J. P. Rock now is probing the secrets of Hunnan, China, where even the geography is not accurate.

Cape Cod Turnips. On Cape Cod a special type of turnip is being developed, asserts the Washington Star. Not that there is anything unusual about the taste of this turnip as compared with similar turnips raised elsewhere. But the interesting thing about the Cape Cod turnip is that it will grow on farms having sandy top soil. It has proved useless to recommend that the regular Cape Coddier move elsewhere if he wishes to grow crops that did not promise to do well in the Barnstables and the Truroes. "Why not adapt the crops to the land?" asks the native. The answer is a turnip with an unusually long tap root which penetrates below the sand stratum to the moist subsoil and flourishes even in spots that weeds find discouraging.

WORLD'S AND WORLDS. The wonders of the heavens are far more wonderful than the flightiest dreams of fanciful child or imaginative adult. The planets visible are countless, and there are countless lights, which as yet, human eye has not seen.

Scientists have just discovered that the Magellanic cloud in the Southern Hemisphere is a vast universe of itself. Hundreds of stars are 10,000 times brighter than the sun. The Magellanic cloud is estimated to be 110,000 light years distant from the earth, and one light year is 6,000,000,000 miles. The linear diameter is 15,000 times six trillions.

COMPASS PLANT WESTERN PRODUCT. On the prairies and plains of Utah, Texas and southern Minnesota there grows a wonderful plant which has proved useful to travelers wandering over these vast tracks of country. It is called the compass plant, or the pilot plant, because of the peculiarity in the growth of the leaves, which grow alternately along the stalk, and point precisely north and south.

The Indians followed the direction given them by these pointing leaves, and told the white men about it. This plant belongs to the family of the Compositae, and looks very much like the sunflower. It has a strong, resinous odor, somewhat like turpentine, and sometimes gives the name of "turpentine plant."

TROLLEY CAR ANNIVERSARY. This year is the thirty-fourth anniversary of the introduction of the modern street car trolley in this country, in Richmond, Va. Since the first Richmond trolley line, street car service has grown prodigiously in the United States. It is said that 15,000,000 persons a year ride on trolley cars. According to estimates, the total trackage is 47,565 miles, while there are more than 100,000 street cars operated by 888 companies. The capital invested totals $6,000,000,000. The linear diameter is 15,000 times six trillions.

The Richmond line was completed May 4, 1888, by Frank J. Sprague, now of New York.

A LOCOMOTIVE CAN JUMP. The bridge engineer of a certain railway showed me, some years ago, a photograph of a locomotive taken just after it had leaped across a twenty-eight foot opening. The big drive wheels rested securely on the cross-ties after jumping the span left vacant by an open drawbridge.

The locomotive had been at the head of a fast freight previous to the accident. It was down grade to the bridge and the draw was open. It was impossible to stop. The train plunged ahead and the locomotive reached the opposite side of the channel and alighted right side up and undamaged. The tender fell into the opening and cars piled up in a heap between the two abutments.

An engineer in the maintenance of way department of a midwest railway told me the following story which I afterward verified, for it was difficult to believe.

A small stone culvert was to be replaced by an iron pipe. There was a sufficient interval between regular trains to complete the work. Red flags were posted at the prescribed distances in both directions.

A gang of workmen excavated the small culvert over the culvert and removed the stone.

At this stage of the work fifteen feet of steel rails only spanned the opening. From them the cross-ties hung by the spikes underneath the ties for a height of some six feet there was nothing but air.

There came the distant rumble of an approaching train. It was a special and the red flag having been over, it came rushing on at full speed. One and all the workmen dropped their tools and ran heading into the open field. The foreman ran, too, not venturing to look back and expecting every second to hear the seemingly inevitable crash.

Finally, at a safe distance, he turned to look. The special was fast disappearing from sight. It had crossed fifteen feet of unsupported rails and continued on its way! Not only had the locomotive jumped the space, but to the amazement of all, three cars behind it had safely negotiated the hazardous crossing.
