SENATOR BOYD IN THE ROLE OF DISTURBER OF THE HOUSE OF JOHNSON

James S. Boyd, a lifelong inhabitant of Montgomery county, and at present ad interim Speaker of the Pennsylvania Senate, is guilty of stirring into belligerent activity the anti-Johnson revolutionists. The Senator's letter (see page 1) addressed to the members of the Republican County Committee applies the term "nepotism" in focusing his attack upon H. Stanley Drake, candidate for County Commissioner, and upon Mr. Drake's father-in-law, Charles Johnson, the veteran leader of the Republican organization of Montgomery county. To the best of the editor's recollection the term has heretofore never been used in public print amid the surging of Montgomery county political billows. In essence "nepotism" means favoritism shown to relatives; the bestowal of patronage by reason of relationship rather than of merit. The influence, potentially, of nepotism figured prominently, and frequently disastrously, in foreign governments in former centuries. This much for the definition of the term. The Senator's application of it has placed Mr. Johnson in a perplexing position, somewhat similar to the mythical character wriggling "between the devil and the deep sea!" If the county leader induces Mr. Drake to withdraw his candidacy he will exhibit a white flag, and such exhibition will be accepted as evidence of fear; and, fear in a battle is frequently taken as a foreboding of defeat. From the Senator's point of view Mr. Drake's continuance in the "running" will result in his defeat at the primary election in September. * * * Senator Boyd clearly was within his personal and political rights when he indicted that letter. Those who are criticizing severely, and more mildly, his politico-literary output likewise are distinctly within their personal and political rights, which they have been prompt in exercising. They are charging the Senator with "ingratitude"; they are contending that Mr. Johnson "made him, politically." In some instances the charges are sulphurized. The Senator and his friends retort that the Senator did as much with his personal and political influence (including that of his money) in "making" and maintaining the Republican organization of the county as the county organization ever did for him. There you are! Take your choice!

Viewed from various angles the present acrimonious disturbance in the Republican ranks of this county is very suggestive and interesting. The House of Johnson is being bombarded by revolutionists armed with political brickbats and more or less high explosives. With what final effect remains to be seen. Damages may be confined to smashed windows, broken doors and some openings in the roof—with detached shingles floating about under atmospheric pressure. Just now, nobody knows! At this writing information indicates that Senator Boyd is "setting up shop" in the formation of a ticket composed of practically all the names of regular Republican organization candidates except that of Mr. Drake, for Commissioner. Aside from nepotism, whatever influence the application of that term exerts, the Senator's efforts may be deemed superfluous and unnecessary and, therefore, of doubtful wisdom. At any rate, Senator Boyd is in the limelight, while the bombardment proceeds!

P. S. Later developments: Senator Boyd has issued a letter to the Republican county committee in which he scathingly scores Leader Johnson and, in lieu of the latter having ignored the Senator's request to retire Mr. Drake, proposes the assembling of a Republican War Board for the purpose of determining upon a ticket to be formed for the use of Republican voters at the coming primary election. Before the curtain rises on the next act, music by the orchestra, with Jake Snooks in the role of first cornetist.

J. STROUD WEBER, CANDIDATE FOR DISTRICT-ATTORNEY

J. Stroud Weber's announcement (first page) of his candidacy for the Republican nomination to the office of District-Attorney, is both definite and suggestive in its statements. After capable and faithful service in the position of First Assistant District-Attorney, his ambition to go a step higher is especially laudable. His record as a prosecutor of criminals before court has been marked with ability and painstaking care, even under "pack horse" pressure imposed by his superior officer. Moreover, his record is without a blemish, and there is in him the making of an excellent District-Attorney. His temerity in denoting his candidacy as that of "no man's man," deserves to be heartily commended by all the Republican voters of the county, to whom he makes his straightforward appeal. It is generally conceded that there is urgently needed a housecleaning in the District-Attorney's office, Norristown, and J. Stroud Weber is just the man for the job. Republicans, you will never regret giving him your support in helping him to get a chance to do the job. He can be wholly trusted to do his duty.

PROFICIENCY DECREASES WITH EXPERIENCE

Editor Sanborn, of the North Penn Reporter, observes: "Mr. Renninger has been studying the details of his office for eleven years and a half and, judged by his works, is less proficient today than in his freshman year." This observation pertinently applies to District-Attorney Renninger—not to some other Renninger.

FOREST TREE SEED

More than 1300 pounds of forest tree seed were required for sowing in the Penna. State Department of Forestry forest tree nurseries this spring. One-half of the seed sown consisted of Norway spruce and red pine. Norway spruce is the leading species with 339 pounds, and red pine is next with 274 pounds.

STREAM MAP

A stream map of the State has recently been published jointly by the Water and Power Resources Board and the Sanitary Water Board. About 800 separate streams are named on the map.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S WAR DEBT HOLIDAY ACCEPTED

President Hoover's proposal for one year's postponement of all inter-governmental debts and reparations has been accepted in principle by all of the important creditor governments. The terms of acceptance by the French Government are, of course, subject to the approval of the other interested Powers, for whom the American Government naturally cannot speak.

The technical difficulties arising from many complicated international agreements, which involve the aggregated payment between governments of over $800,000,000 per annum, are now in the course of solution by the good will and earnest co-operation of governmental leaders everywhere.

GREAT AIR RECORD SCORED

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, the two fliers in their monoplane, Winnie Mae, of Oklahoma City, landed at Roosevelt Field—the same airport from which they started on Tuesday, June 23—at 8:47 o'clock, July 1. A surging throng of some 10,000 persons, including Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, cheered the two airmen as the white monoplane soared down to journey's end. The crowd set up a terrific clamor as the Winnie Mae taxied in from the center of the field. Automobile sirens, loudspeakers, horns and thousands of shrieking humans contributed to the bedlam. The official time of landing as given out by air field operators was 8:47.10. Post and Gatty completed their flight around the world in 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes. This was more than 13 days faster than the Graf Zeppelin made its circuit of the globe. It was over a day faster than the fliers' own forecast.

4-H CLUBS PLAN RALLY

Boys and girls 4-H Club work is reaching more than 300 members in Montgomery county this year, according to Miss Ethel Beadles and R. G. Waltz, agricultural extension workers in Montgomery county. A 4-H Club rally for all the members will be held at Memorial Park, Schuensville, Tuesday, July 21. The forenoon program will be devoted to games and original contests under the supervision of J. M. Keim of the Pennsylvania State College. The afternoon program includes group singing under the leadership of Charles E. Wismer, president of the Agricultural Extension Association, and an address by the Reverend N. F. Schmidt, of Schuensville. Miss Louise Everett of the Philadelphia Dairy Council will present a play entitled, "The Pirate." A number of moving picture reels will be shown.

Girls club work is being conducted in the following communities: Pottstown, Sanatoga, Trappe, Evansburg, Swamp, New Hanover, Center Square, Montgomeryville, Horsham, Perkiomenville, Limerick, Greentree and Worcester; flower clubs at Center Point and East Greenville, strawberry club, Holstein calf club, Guernsey calf club and a baby beef club.

CENSUS REVEALS DECREASE IN FARMS; 3360 IN MONTG. CO.

The 1930 farm census for Montgomery county, just released by the bureau of census, Department of Commerce, shows a decrease in the number of farms in the last ten years with only a slight increase in the acreage per farm. The estimated value of the farm land and buildings in 1930 is about $10,000,000, less than the estimated value for 1920. At the time of the census there were 3,360 farms in the county as compared with 4,840 in 1920, while the average acreage per farm had increased from 50.6 acres to 51.1 acres. The combined value of land and buildings is now estimated to be $57,352,775 while in 1920 it was $67,125,893. The value of farm dwellings was estimated for the first time in 1930, and found to be $15,124,610. The value of implements and machinery in use on farms has shown a decrease from $5,323,272 in 1920 to $3,926,157 in 1930. The value of the land alone is seen to have taken a great drop between 1920 and 1925 and to have increased to nearly its former value by 1930. The value of the land in 1920 was $32,745,353, in 1925 the value was $17,274,925, and in the latest report the value is $28,352,103. The report on tenure of farms in Montgomery county shows a great decrease in the number of farms operated by tenants, a halving of the number of farms operated by managers and about a one-third decrease in the number operated by owners. The number of farms operated by tenants was reduced from 837 to 372, while the number operated by managers was sliced from 337 to 127. Owner operated farms showed the smallest percentage of decrease, the actual figures being 3,666 in 1920 and 2,861 in 1930. Great variance is shown in the size of farms, those most favored ranging from twenty to ninety-nine acres. There were 1,423 farms in the county in 1920, while the number at present is 1,032. The number of farms between twenty and fifty acres is given at 1,075 for 1930 as compared to 1,500 in 1920. The number of farms under three acres was the only classification to show an increase over the ten year period, and an increase of nearly a hundred per cent is recorded. The total amount of land devoted to crop growth has decreased from 159,951 acres to 124,638, the Department of Commerce report points out, while the amount of pasture land has shown an increase of from 21,998 acres to 26,103. The number of livestock of every classification have decreased over the ten year period. Although the horses and other animals of burden have shown a decrease of nearly two-thirds, the decrease in cattle, hogs and chickens has been less than one half. A steady decrease has been shown in the production of all the major crops of the county over the decade, except in the case of Irish potatoes. The production of the potatoes in 1919 was 287,900 bushels. The production was cut to 218,939 bushels in 1924, while in 1929 the output had increased to 425,730 bushels. The increase in the potato output has practically doubled despite the fact that the amount of acreage devoted to the growing of this crop has been almost cut in half. In 1919 there were 4,696 acres in the county devoted to potato growing, while there were in 1929 only 2,739 acres used for the production of potatoes.

BRENNON LONGED FOR A HOME

By FANNIE HURST

TWENTY-FIVE years is a long time to be heavy, home, and then at the end of it feel frustration. That however was the case with Charles Brennon, superintendent, proprietor, manager, and general manager of the Hotel Savoy, the first-rate hotel of a city of considerably over two hundred thousand inhabitants.

Brennon had personally built up his hotel to its important proportions, dividing it successfully into two sections: The Annex, or family wing, and the hotel proper, which invited the patronage of transients and those who were availing themselves of the town's famous curative waters, which were renowned for their medicinal qualities.

And so it happened that the Savoy catered to three distinct groups. Families, Commercial men and women. Rheumatic patients.

One might have thought that such variety of patronage would have lent interest and even glamour to Brennon's role of hotel man, and in a way it did, yet this same fact in itself was a factor in the ultimate sense of frustration that time and again, as he grew older and more deeply entrenched in his work, swept and depressed him.

What struck most painfully into the sense of loneliness which was more and more oppressing him in his daily life among the rooms, was the fact that of all the hundreds who daily milled in and out of his hostelry, lived there; entertained there; dined there; wine there, he alone seemed the homeless one. He alone, among all the coming and going, seemed to be the one who was neither coming nor going. Even the families in the Annex were usually there on a temporary basis; awaiting the completion of a new home; pending a marriage; taking a year of between changes of permanent address.

In fact, it was the families in the Annex that contributed most of all to the growing unrest that was Brennon's. The unit of these little groups was so snug. Even sitting around with them of an evening in the lobby and then seeing them troop off together to the rooms, their apartments, gave him that cold alien sense he was more than ever beginning to dread. Husbands and wives trailing off together. Brothers and sisters bantering their way up to bed. Pairs of people sharing the intimacies of family life; of domestic life. Then, in the commercial and transient wings, men and women on their way to homes. Men and women eager for mail from homes, anxious to get back to domestic groups; awaited at some remote point by eager loved ones.

Then Brennon himself, doomed, as he was beginning to put it, to the impersonal detached existence of the hotel. When Brennon went to his rooms nights there was the paraphernalia of hotel. Bed turned down by impersonal chambermaid hands. Night light turned on by those same employed hands. Carafe of hotel water. Bowl of hotel flowers. Cold. Impersonal. And all under the same roof. Families waiting to tuck themselves into homes. Transients eager to return to homes.

Twenty-five years of hotel life had made something of a self-pitiful out of Brennon. He felt sorry over the cold detached quality of his existence. He felt left out. Left over. Chilled.

But it was not until after twenty-five years of it that consistently he began to set about doing something about it. Well-off in worldly goods by now, content within his own mind that he had proved himself capable of success, thought of retirement now began to grip him. Retirement and, at fifty-three, a suddenly flourishing hope and ambition for marriage.

Into a life peculiarly unremarkable where women were concerned, this new phase entered, taking him by storm. In his success and maturity, Brennon wanted marriage and domesticity; domesticity as far removed as possible from the lobby, the grillroom, or the thoroughfare.

These elements might have entered more surely into his reckoning except for the fact that at fifty-three, Brennon fell in love; fell in love to such an extent that had the widow Smeade stipulated that they live their lives out atop an omnibus, Brennon would have consented. Fortunately, however, the desires of the widow Smeade were simple, intelligent ones that fitted in nicely with his scheme. A hotel dweller herself, for fourteen years past, it was with a certain relief that she fell in with the plans of Brennon to divorce themselves as fast as possible from the more noisome un-private existence of the public hostelry.

The Savoy was offered for sale, and brought a price far handsomer than he had anticipated.

At fifty-four, feeling younger than he had in twenty years, married to a lovely, well-preserved woman of his passionate choice, he was in the blessed position of giving expression to the desires that had so long rankled him.

The Brennon's chose a house on one of the private, restricted, residential streets of the town, furnished it to the Queen's and their own tastes, created a garden about it, stocked their garage with cars, hired servants, and set about the delightful business of making their house a home in every sense of the word.

And the new Mrs. Brennon had a knack. Under her firm and authentic touch, the home took on life, so to speak. In all his previous frustrated dreams, Brennon admitted to himself, he had never quite succeeded in visualizing the kind of perfection this woman brought to the creating of a home.

Privacy, lovely furnishings, small personal touches of flowers in bowls arranged by her; color schemes worked out according to her knowledge of his taste; the bed folded back by her loving hands because she knew the way he liked his pillows piled. Sentimental, if you will, but where his new happiness was concerned, Brennon was unashamedly that.

It was not until after five years of their cloudless marriage that Brennon and his wife took their first trip out into the world which flowed about this home. They went to a city some four hundred miles away from their town, there to enjoy the theaters and concerts of the larger metropolises.

It was while they were at the Grand hotel there and enjoying what they were pleased to call their second honeymoon, that the opportunity to purchase a new hostelry at an absurdly low price literally fell into Brennon's lap.

At first the idea was preposterous and both he and his wife turned willing backs upon the entire idea. But strangely, in the case of both of them, the idea simply would not be downed. After all, the new Mrs. Brennon had lived fourteen years in the light and glamour of hotel life and there was something about it—something about it—

As for Brennon, he was the old racehorse pawing the turf. Time and time again he turned his face away, only to scent back again, hypnotized. The inevitable happened. For seven years Brennon and his wife have occupied a six-room suite in their hotel, the Grand. During that time the idea simply would not be downed. After all, the new Mrs. Brennon had lived fourteen years in the light and glamour of hotel life, and there was something about it—something about it—
