ABRAHAM LINCOLN He stands alone—a model man! He followed neither cult nor clan. Led by the constant star of hope He saw life from a broader scope.

For The Independent.

He mingled daily with his kind And freely used his fertile mind. To him this life was just a school-His motto was the Golden Rule.

The grandest figure of the age! He left a record on life's page, A worthy one for all to see That can be read by you and me.

It tells a story sad—sublime— And brings to mind that darkened tin Before the welcome dawn of Peace Bade slavery forever cease.

After the years of toil and strife That nearly sapped the Nation's life, Our well loved land united stood For blessed Peace and Brotherhood.

It stands today United, Free! Our glorious Flag of Liberty Flung to the breeze without a stain, Will ever honor Lincoln's name. MRS. HENRY ARMSTRONG.

SUNDAY LEGISLATION.

An attempt is about to be made by the Legislature to modify or amend the moss-backed Pennsylvania Sunday Blue Law of 1794 A legislator has really mustered enough courage to introduce a Home Rule Bill to permit communities to decide whether they shall or shall not allow Sunday sports between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m. The measure is meeting with strenuous opposition from fanatical Sabbatarians. They fear that the adoption of the proposed liberalizing legislative enactment will serve as a wedge to open wide the way for all manner of Sunday diversions, enjoyments, and commercializations. It is a conspicuously marvelous commentary on the indifferent intelligence and rationality of the people of Pennsylvania that they have permitted the 1794 Sunday law to exist with slight, if any, modifications for 138 years. From a purely human and secular standpoint it is well that one day per week should be set apart for rest, various forms of recreation and, of course, for all manner of religious activity, because of common respect for the inalienable right of all who desire to thus specially observe Sunday. But it has appeared down through more than a hundred years that those who have been and now are protected in all their religious rights and Sunday observances have been, and continue so to be, determined-in many instances, insolently determined-to specify just what a majority of their fellow citizens shall not do Sundays, thus running counter to human nature, and the progress of human thought. Down through more than a hundred years legislators at Harrisburg have trembled with fear because of the rod of ecclesiastical iron swinging about their heads whenever danger appeared to confront the so-termed sanctity of Sundays. From a religious standpoint it is not so much the religion of the Jesus Christ of the New Testament as it is creedal, religious intolerance that continues to actuate the insistent and persistent opponents of a modern liberalization of long existing Sunday laws; as it is the disposition of those inclined not to be fairly well satisfied in attending to their own business, their own personal affairs-many of them playing the role of hypocrites in assuming to regulate the personal Sunday activities of their neighborhood-of those who prefer to mind their own business . . . THE INDEPENDENT has always taken the position that whatever human conduct or behavior is wrongful on Sundays is equally wrongful during other days of every week, and should be discountenanced. Natural causes and effects, as they affect human conduct (as they affect and determine all human affairs) take no cognizance, per se, of man-made laws-Sunday laws entirely included. Now, it is quite an established fact that all the exponents of all religions have full swing and full protection in Pennsylvania, on Sundays and during every other day of the week-full swing and full protection in all their efforts to minister to the religious needs of their fellowmen. Not so? Also, full swing and full protection in all their efforts to make their religious services so attractive and helpful as to graciously, not forcibly, impel larger attendances on Sundays. Naught can be gained, much can be lost, by sheer stubborn persistency, on the part of overly zealous Sabbatarians. Sooner or later, they will be required to either "bend or break !" No doubt about that. Why not now begin to bend just a bit-by withdrawing their opposition to the Home Rule Bill? Why not put a little earthly wisdom into practice?

BACK TO THE OLD CONVENTION PLAN OF NAMING POLITICAL CANDIDATES?

Perhaps! A bill is now being considered by the lawmakers at Harrisburg which proposes the elimination of the direct primary election system in favor of something like the old convention system of nominating candidates for political offices. There is argument pro and con. Undoubtedly, the primary election system has proven to be enormously expensive, without in the least elevating the personnel of the nominees chosen at primary elections. In offsetting this view, it is contended that the present system affords all electors equal opportunities to participate in the nomication of candidates for public offices, thus more fully sustaining the people's form of government. All this is fine in theory, but much of a failure in practice-because of the more or less appalling indifference of a multitude of electors. The same "because" also applied to the former public money-saving delegate-convention system. From a practical, economical standpoint, the old convention system has not been distanced by the present primary election plan.

IS THAT SO, HENRY?

Henry Ford's opinions are multitudinous on multitudinous subjects. That he should at least occasionally err in his conclusions is quite probable, if not factual. One of his latest promulgations reads like this : "It is silly to suggest that man can be dominated by the machine which he creates and controls." That conclusion may appear quite brilliant to the great Henry Ford, as well as to those who regard him as an errorless twentieth century wonder, but-there are a million or more hand and brain workers thrown out of employment by machines, by mechanical contrivances, in the United States, who do not share Henry's conclusion ; who will be disposed to reckon him to be partly "off in the head".

AN IMPORTANT AMENDMENT ADDED TO THE CONSTITUTION.

A simple formality at the State Department, Washington, D. C., Monday, put an important amendment into the Constitution, after a long journey through Congress and the State Legislatures. With several State Department officials and two other witnesses present, Secretary Stimson signed the proclamation announcing to the nation that a sufficient number of Legislatures had approved the measure to make it effective. Under the Amendment, the first regular session of the next Congress will open on January 3, as will each session thereafter, and the 1937 inaugural will be on January 20 instead of March 4.

A COMET'S SCARS.

Human beings once lived in terror of comets. Church bells were rung, sermons were preached to keep the comet away. Now the Association for the Advancement of Science learns that a comet actually did hit the earth about 1,000,000 years ago, striking South Carolina. From an airplane you can see the "scars" made by the comet's head, 400 miles in diameter, bigger than the giant

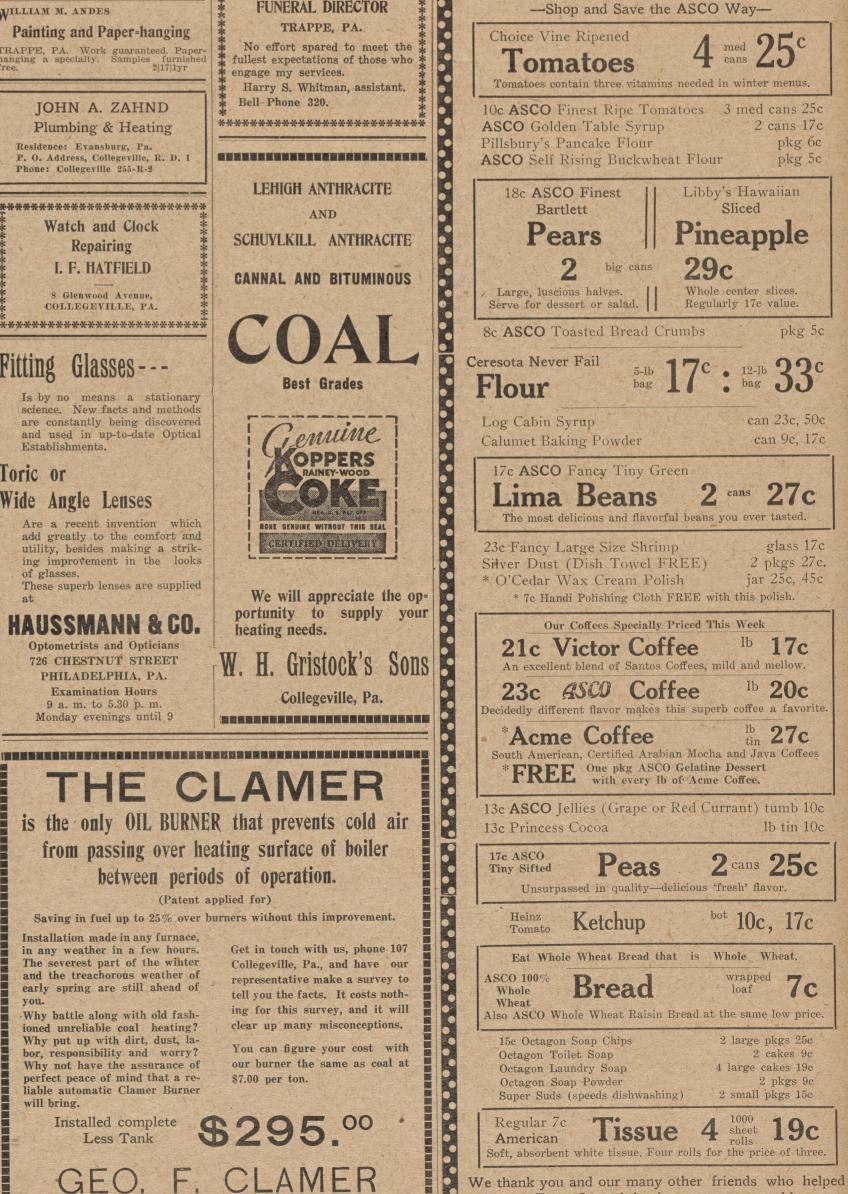

... TIS THE SLOGAN of actors and performers that the show must go ahead no matter what has happened. In spite of suffering o: hardship, there is still that obligation to meet.

What an incentive this attitude must be to business of today! It isn't easy to surmount difficulties never encountered before; but the inherent determination and resourcefulness which built up our industries will, if called upon, again conquer the situation.

Such is our belief and practice. With reduced income, lowest rates in our history, taxes comprising 10 per cent of electric revenue, enormous equipment to operate, and our commitment to maintain unimpaired public service, we have proved that to carry on means to carry through.

Try this doctrine on your own organization, "The show must go on." We predict a safe journey and a happy solution.
