For The Independent. ONE DAY AT A TIME

Carry your burdens 'till nightfall Although they are heavy to bear, Then lay them aside my Brother And rest from your load of care.

No matter how hard the struggle You can live one day at a time. Earnestly, patiently, kindly, With a hope serene, sublime.

No matter how dark the present— In the morrow may come to you The blessings you long have hoped for With your cherished dreams come true.

One day at a time my Brother Till the sun goes down in the west. Resolve that you will give to life A day of your very best.

MRS. HENRY ARMSTRONG. Dorchester, Mass.

STOP THIS HIGHWAY SLAUGHTER

The Associated Press recently made a State-wide survey of automobile accidents. The conclusions reached after a summary of the statistics is especially important in view of the terrible toll of dead and injured.

It was found that 12,438 accidents had been reported to the Highway Patrol from June 1 to September 1. One death for every 200 mishaps is said to be the Summer average.

"Give us more highway patrolmen," the voice of safety demanded repeatedly in this survey.

"Imprison the reckless as well as the drunken driver" was another demand.

"Improve the driver as much as we have his machine."

"Show courtesy to the safe driver instead of to the violator."

"Spend some of the gasoline tax for page advertisements to educate drivers."

"Give us horse sense in the driver to match horse power in the auto."

"Authorize highway patrolmen to pronounce drivers drunk without medical examination.'

"Let Grand Juries do their full duty."

"Examine drivers as well as cars periodically."

"Revoke more licenses."

"Make examinations for drivers' license stiffer."

SEVEN WEEKS TO ELECTION

Just seven weeks to election!

Seven weeks to clear away the wreckage of political hopes strewn about the landscape by Tuesday's balloting. Seven weeks to patch up cuts and heal wounds.

Seven weeks to form programs, to restore peace.

That is the situation today confronting Montgomery county political leaders. Upon the vigor with which they tackle their jobs depends the outcome on November 5 when Republicans and Democrats clash head-on.

It has been a bitter campaign, disclosing glaring weaknesses, destroying some careers, launching others. Neither Republicans nor Democrats have escaped unscathed. Perhaps it may fairly be said that the Republicans have suffered more than the Democrats.

For the vaunted Republican organization has been proved no longer united in Montgomery county. It has been torn apart by factional rivalries. In the heat of battle names have been called which will rankle in the hearts of men and women long into the future.

The breaking up of the political machine built by Charles Johnson and nurtured by him seems inevitable. That could be predicted regardless of the outcome of Tuesday's balloting. A group of men set out to establish themselves as leaders in his place. They will continue to regard themselves as the logical successors of the Secretary of the Republican state committee and continue to seek new powers. Ultimately they will quarrel and split into new factions, because there is no room in any political unit for three man leadership. The whole history of politics discloses that leadership is a ONE MAN proposition. ONE MAN rules-and rules only until some other man rises to supplant him.

Against this group of leaders there was arrayed a group of those loyal to Johnson. They fought to save his organization by keeping it intact. They will have to fight again and again. New groups will be formed. The Republicans in the last analysis, can look forward only to bitter factional strife which will continue to weaken their organization to the point where the Democrats will succeed them in power, unless another Johnson appears, or the present one regains the undivided loyalty of his followers.

Some believe that in the November general elections the Democrats will catch up with the Republicans. That is by no means certain. Few political machines fall apart within so short a time; yet it HAS been done.

Whether it will occur in Montgomery county depends upon the rapidity with which wounds created in the primary battle are healed. Today those wounds are wide open. It is certain that some of them will remain unhealed until November, and that a substantial block of Republican votes, representing ballots of the losers in this week's contest, will go to Democratic candidates. But it would be foolish for the Democrats to bank on winning the election with that support alone.

They must demonstrate that their own factional contest was superficial and that they really constitute a united party. Only when they have done that, can they hope to win substantial support from the disgusted Republican element.

THE NEUTRALITY BILL

One of the most dramatic acts of the late Congress occurred, entirely unexpectedly as far as the general public was concerned, just before the session passed into history.

This act was the passage of the so-called "neutrality plan," proposed by the White House, originated by the Senate, and forced through the House by Administration leaders under a gag rule

Reason for this unprecedented occurrence does not require a microscope to discover. Everyone knows that Europe is closer to a major war than at any time since 1914. The American State Department doubtless has a much better idea of how close war is than any other domestic agency. And with the memory of the "incidents" that brought America into the World War still fresh, the Administration, which has consistently pursued an extremely cautious foreign policy, seems determined to keep us out of future conflicts if that is at all possible. High spots of the neutrality plan include:

Prohibition of the export of arms and ammunition to any foreign belligerent until February 29, 1936 (by that time another Congress will be in session, and will be able to cope with changed conditions.)

Prohibition of the use of American vessels in arms traffic until February 29, 1936.

Authorization for the President to restrict or entirely close territorial American waters to the ships of belligerents.

Authorization for the President to forbid American citizens to travel abroad during war except at their own risk.

The provision whereby Americans traveling on ships belong ing to belligerents must do so at their own risk is perhaps an important part of the bill-remember the Lusitania?

* DOG-TRAINING SEASON IS HERE

The 1935 dog-training season opened in Pennsylvania, on August 20, and will continue to the last day of February, on any game except elk, deer, bear and wild turkeys, between one hour before sun-rise and 10 o'clock p. m., eastern standard time. Possession of shotguns and rifles is absolutely prohibited while training. A change in the law permits the training of dogs on Sundays. Dogs may be trained on racoons in open season day or at night until 10 p.m. It is necessary to have a hunter's license while training dogs, according to the county treasurer's office.

If a side arm-pistol is carried while training to accustom the dog to gun fire, it is necessary to have the weapon registered at the office miringly at her slender young figure to gun fire, it is necessary to have of the county treasurer in which the trainer resides.

The cost of the registration is 15 cents for licensed hunters or fishermen. Otherwise the customary charge for carrying a small fire arm is 50 cents payable to the Employment certificates issued by local school authorities are now required for minors under 18 including those now already employed. Children under 18 are prohibited from employment in an establishment where alcoholic liquors are manufactured, sold or handled. A 21-year minimum age also was provided for direct serving or hand-change the trimming on her best hat, one of the heaviest lines Ursinus but it had faded underneath.

Mrs. Fink made her go over and see the white silk cross-stitched with black and orange. It was charming. But the hat Mrs. Fink had got to go with the dress took Ruth's breath away. It was the hat of her dreams. She bit her lip, trying to keep down a pang of envy as Mrs. Fink carelessly twirled the hat on her hand. She let Ruth try on the hat. And the way Ruth looked in it! It made her blue eyes bluer, her cheeks pinker, her hair brighter. That night she dreamed about the black hat Next morning Ruth was all excitement. She hurried with the dishwashing. She put the tiny home to rights with deft, swift motions.

The wedding was at noon. At then minutes to eleven when she was all dressed ready to go the telephone bell rang. Mrs. Fink had called up to say hoarsely that her throat was getting worse every minute-she couldn't go. "I'm so sorry! It's too bad! That lovely dress! That elegant hat! Is there something I can do for you, Mrs. Fink?" Ruth's voice was full of honest concern. "Oh, I've got everything to doctor with. Say, Ruth! You can wear the hat if you want to."

"Oh, Mrs. Fink! Do you really mean it? You aren't joking, are you?" "I should say not! Stop in on your way past and get it." Ruth had always made it a rule not to borrow or lend unless there was real necessity for doing so. Andrew was dead set against the practice himself.

They had started out in their married life to be independent, square and conservative. Up to this moment they had both fulfilled the conditions of their little informal contract.

But now Ruth yielded to the lure of the hat. She saw no harm in wearing it, especially as her friend had so kindly offered to loan it.

She was very happy when she put the hat on her bright head. She failed to notice Mrs. Fink's rather odd little mental ability. Temperament differences and intelligence similarities between these two favored domestic animals have recently been revealed by tests at Cornell university by Dr. L. Pearl Garner as part of a series of experiments on the nature of learning in man and animals, says Science Service.

> Cows not only learn as easily as horses but remember better what they have learned, it was discovered. Among the six breeds of cows used in the test the best "milker" was also the best learner.

The learning problem for the cows and horses was to find breakfast when it was hidden in one of a row of three boxes under a black cloth. Altogether 41 cows were tested with 850 trials and 62 horses with 1,234 trials. The cows were timid and fearful. Many were so afraid that they preferred to go breakfastless rather than attack the strange thing. Although most of the horses pushed into the cloth during the first four trials, only about half the cows dared to do this. Yet when the scores were all in it was found that both horses and cows had the same average of seven boxes opened before the correct one in 22 trials. Cows made mistakes in the method of attack less frequently than horses, who nudged the box that was already open.

Ten of the cows who had learned the problem were re-tested after a year during which they had had a vacation from the experimenting. Their retention for a year was much better than that of horses over a period of three to eight months, it was found.

Thackeray's Dread

The novelist's great fear is that he may write himself out, his invention might become weary. Thackeray told the world how he himself felt this fatigue and how he often wished he could get some one to do "the business" of his stories. The love-making parts of "the business" particularly annoyed him, and made him blush, in the privacy of his study, "as if he were going into an apoplexy."

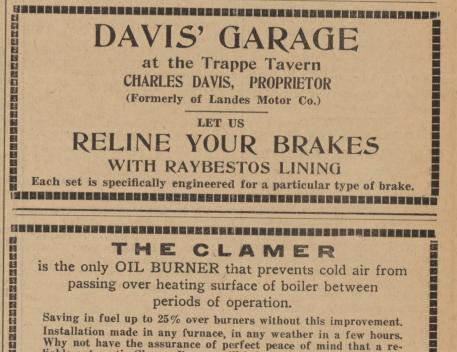

Fearful Sultan of Turkey

No monarch ever lived in greater fear of his life than Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey, 1876-1909. Although Yildiz palace in Constantinople was highly fortified, his private rooms contained trap doors, mirrors set at angles, loaded revolvers and lifelike wax models of himself-in various positions-which he hoped would fool assassins and receive the knife or bul lets intended for him.-Collier's Week

WHY Drive Anything Less Than a V=8?

When you spend your money for a car - get your money's worth. Get a car that has a V-type Engine-the type of Engine that powers the world's finest automobile-the world's finest speed boat-and the world's finest plane.

No car under $2300 has a V-8 Engine-EXCEPT the Ford V-8.

Once you sit behind the wheel of the Ford V-8 and feel its satin-smooth "pickup" - you'll readily understand why thousands of former Expensive Car Owners are now owners of Ford V-8's.
