With the open dormitory issue sorted out, and the way the Student Government is now free to deal with the other numerous and varied matters of student concern.

The U.S.G.A. has been grappling with the problem of selecting Judicial Board members for several years. Both faculty and student members of the board have been called upon to be the final judges in many types of campus offenses. A more precise method has long been needed to choose people capable of persistent justice, who can decide in a fair and just manner.

Jim Stellar and Jane Siegel are working on a new method, which will be more fully elaborated at the next meeting. Meanwhile, the English majors reported to Council on possible weaknesses in the Judicial Board. This group is administered to select majors as a pre-requisite for graduation. A number of Senate members were discussed. A few members appeared to speak of the involved professors and develop a system of standards, which were presented to the Academic Council, concerning this issue.

According to the statistic that three people died of malnutrition in Indiana, the Student Government has planned immediate action. Paul Kettler’s “common ground” project between the administration and students may be the vehicle of this action. A motion is expected at the next meeting for the project to center on helping the poor people in this immediate community.

Dr. Hans Kung

One of the most controversial of the reforming Roman Catholic priests, Dr. Hans Kung, will speak at Temple University on Friday, November 12 at 8 p.m. in Baptist Temple, located on 17th Street in Philadelphia.

Kung, whose writings are currently under investigation by a high Vatican tribunal, has challenged the entire doctrine of Papal infallibility, recommends that Catholic couples follow their own conscience on birth control and remain in the church, believes that priests and laymen should have a voice in selecting bishops, and even that the Pope, and that the priesthood should be open to married men and women.

His long campaign for ecumenism, greater freedom and decentralization of authority within the Church has seen some wins and some losses, but his message of hope and reconciliation to the many divisions within the Christian walk has received a great acceptance since the start of Vatican Council II in 1962 and Dr. Kung’s proposal that lay people participate in the Church has been well taken and put into effect at some levels in many places. But at various times, he has been criticized by a number of archdioceses from speaking in Los Angeles, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia.

Dr. Kung’s appearance at Temple will be sponsored by the John XXIII Ecumenical Center of Paulist Press and the John XXIII Ecumenical Studies, an inter-religious quarterly published at the University and edited by Dr. Leonard A. Swidler, professor of religion at Temple.

The Congregation still has much at the forefront. It finds that the books do not conform to the traditional Roman Catholic teaching, it could insist that Dr. Kung retract them under threat of excommunication.

A group of 289 Christians from 12 countries has recently petitioned the Vatican on Dr. Kung’s behalf. The petitioners, including many leading theologians and churchmen, are supporting Dr. Kung’s position and have filed a petition with the Congregation’s dossier of accusations against him. They assert that “Kung’s rising influence among Christians is a growing threat to the unity of the Church.”

Participants in the tour are expected to discuss their ideas and beliefs. They are expected to share their experiences and gain insight into the lives of others.

Dr. Kung’s topics are “Jesus Christ: Church of Pastors,” “Jesus and the Church,” “Jesus and the Law,” and “Infallsible? An Inquiry,” published in a recent book he has written.

Several high-ranking Vatican officials have noted that Dr. Kung’s work has stirred so much controversy within conservative Roman Catholic circles that they are not prepared to deal with him by their orthodox position.

The Congregation will still have the matter at the forefront. It finds that the books do not conform to the traditional Roman Catholic teaching, it could insist that Dr. Kung retract them under threat of excommunication.

The tour will include discussions on the themes of philosophy, theology, ethics, and church history. The program is designed to provide a comprehensive understanding of the Roman Catholic Church and its role in the modern world.

The tour will conclude with a final session, where participants will have the opportunity to engage in open discussions and share their thoughts and experiences.

Henry C. Fitz

Henry C. Fitz will receive a Doctor of Law Degrees, L.L.D., and will deliver the address, "In Praise of Small Valleys," referring to the importance of the Brandywine River. Fitz serves as the President of the University of Pennsylvania, and has been a strong advocate for the preservation of historical sites.

Andrew Wyeth

Andrew Wyeth, the best known living American artist, alternates between residences between Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania, and Maine. The surroundings of his two homes have inspired Wyeth to portray scenes of nature and of people who live in, his most famous being "Christa’s World" displayed at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. Wyeth is the first living painter honored with a one-man show at the White House. Currently forty-one of his works are on display at a three-generation show at the Brandywine River Museum, Chadds Ford. Ursinus College will award Wyeth the Doctor of Human Letters Degree, L.L.D., on November 12.

U.S. Department of Justice Continues College Program

The Justice Department will continue its program of visiting college campuses for another year, a high Department official announced today.

Jerris Leonard, Administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, made the announcement on behalf of Attorney General John N. Mitchell to the Third Annual Conference of the Association of Justice Students at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Mitchell had announced the program a year ago during an appearance before the same group.

In addressing the group, Mr. Leonard noted that the Women’s Bureau of Justice Department officials had been working to improve communication between college students and the Department, and added:

"We believe that was done. I’ve been on several of those visits, and I found them both personally and professionally rewarding. My impression of what students believe should be the nation’s priority has changed considerably.

In opening these lines of communication, we also find a certain amount of misinformation prevalent on the campuses we visit. Let me say a word about the benefit to be gained from the facts.

The overall message to the President and his Administration is that the Department must look to the future and be sure to respect the degree to which many students are both committed and informed."

"Phase II” to Combat Inactivity

On Saturday, November 6th, "Phase II" will be put into operation to combat campus inactivity.

The Classes of 73 and 74 will sponsor an evening of fun, frolic, and goodnight sticks. Music will be provided by "Company," an established band gaiing from Pottstown, Pa. Cinema features include: The Three Stooges in "Hot Licks"; and a gala review of "Road to Hong Kong." If you break from the books, before they break you, BE THERE!
Having been an economics major, Danny plans to put his knowledge to good use when he buys his Van. He also plans to try and do whatever he can to avoid being "in the doghouse". "When all is right in this world, I'll celebrate by going to the doghouse," he said.

The social life here would be even better if it wasn't against the rules.

Question: "What do you think about the apathy at Ursinus?"

Danny: "I can't think anybody really cares.

Well, I'm not sure about the food at Ursinus, Danny does not have any criticism to make. "On the whole, the food is palatable. But as far as training meals go, I really don't think that chili is appropriate for a day of a soccer player."

Question: "What do you think about the rules at Ursinus?"

"When you leave Ursinus, one of the major problems is adjusting to reality. Here you have access to a complete environment, 21 years old and it's sad to have a girl, to want to drink, to want to do anything you want... When you get out you realize this is it... A lot of the rules are as old as Freeland Hall was and deserve the same fate... It's no use telling everyone what's wrong here, because if they don't know, they won't understand.

"I've gained a lot here, but I'm not so sure that I wouldn't have gained that and more anywhere else. I think Ursinus has restricted my growth more than it has helped it, and at the same time these restrictions might have helped me to grow through your awareness of them. Whereas if it were outside space, I would probably think about that kind of thing."

Originally Danny was going to do his own Focus, and he wrote the following:

"If you judge a person by his looks or the way he dresses, then someone's still dressing you."

On Friday, October 20, the Bears played PMC (Pennsylvania Military College). It was a big improvement over the last two games. Coaches Manning and Doe Baker made a switch in the lineup. Mike Cash who had been playing left half back was moved up to left wing while Charles Anthony was moved back to Mike's place. The result was that the Bears now had a stronger shooter on the line. Since Dan Snyder has been out the Bears have lost their shooting ability. Don Young was also returned to the line, having been out for a few weeks with the flu. The result was that Ursinus had 29 shots at the PMC goal while PMC only returned 10. Another improvement in this game was increased passing on the part of the Bears. The team's real test was yesterday, when they faced Haverford.

Soccer: 4-2-3 And 5 To Go

THE U.S. DEPT. OF JUSTICE
(Continued from Page 1, Col. 5) prosecute us only in combating street crime but also in fighting and overcoming that shadowy adversary, organized crime. Additionally we are making progress in the area of Civil Rights, a field which I have been active for, I serve as Assistant Attorney General of the United States Division, in the promotion of free competition, and in the curbing of pollution.

Before I start, the Attorney General has asked me to announce that the Justice Department is beginning the series of campus visits he announced to this audience last year.

In upholding these lines of communication, one must also guard against a certain amount of misinformation prevalent on the campuses we visit. I think this is especially true of one team rather than the Alumni. On the good side is the argument that this game is very desirable. CALL Alumni for they get to actually feel the team out, they get to play, and they get to see old friends and new ones. I enjoy watching some of the older players show off their handling control. All in all, it was a good game and a shame that not all the returning Alumni were aware of the time change.

The Bears have two home games coming up, La Salle on Nov. 5, at 2:00, and Franklin and Marshall at 2:00 on Saturday, Nov. 20. Let’s all try to make those last two home games so the Bears can really say they have the students’ support. I must add that there were more students at the PMC game and the Alumni game than there had been at the University of Delaware game. The team appreciates this support and once again thanks you.

KILT KLAAS’ COMMENT:

We Did It Again!

By RUTHANN CONNELL

That’s right, the Rams of West Chester had been overcome by our Re- dazzling Beavers for the second consecutive season. The game of the season was on Thursday, October 25th, away at West Chester. It was a warm day and there were spectators everywhere. It was a game exploding with tension yet controlled by a steady, solid skill. Our team’s speed and strength was seasoned with desire as they played a great game. The first half was scoreless and both teams playing well. But, early in the second half, Harriet Reynolds hand- ed a tick from Robin Cash, then proceeded to get by two defending Rams, finally driving the ball past the W.C. goalie for the first score of the game. With this the U.C. fans went wild, such jubilation at a hockey game this season I have not seen. The Snellines continued to兩個 gives, not let- ting up for a minute. The score came later in the game when Harriet took one from outside the circle. Robin was on her knees, but it was Beth Anderson who hanged it in. Again the fans danced with delight and jumped for joy. The final score was 2-0. I can’t enough about the efforts of the defense. Popeye appeared calm and collected all game. Tom, Boomer, Lucy, and Claudia stopped everything and fed the forwards fantastically. The attack - Bish, Seth, Robin, Skipley, and Harri- et worked together in their best effort this season. The entire team contributed to the win, which is the way it is supposed to work. What a TEAM.
