Senate Urges Reading Period Before Exams

At a recent meeting of the Women's Student Government the idea of a reading period was brought up. Since many colleges and universities in the area have such a program it was felt that such a program might be beneficially initiated at Ursinus. The suggested idea was that classes not be held on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday before the beginning of examinations thus giving two additional study days.

It was felt that the proposed program should be worked out in such a way as to eliminate the drawbacks encountered in many programs on other campuses. Three plus two plan was suggested. Since students would have the bad habit of putting things off to the last minute, the second day would allow the students sufficient time to study the least important material. Students should be permitted to spend as much as 30 of the student's time studying. Many students have found that as many as four hours in a day were necessary to gain a clear idea of the subject of the last half of the semester. It was suggested that the program not be of the type held at the University of Pennsylvania. The course reading would be mandatory rather than the regular reading.

Upon completion of a reading schedule for the three days it seemed to be a general realization that the course reading should be studied. As one completed his schedule he would find the last day of classes without delay and the reading schedule would become study early. Since the student had already done the needed reading it seemed necessary.

Examination Schedule

NOTE: Errors, omissions or conflicts in this Examination Schedule should be compared with your instructor's list when necessary. With Dr. Hinke. In general the Schedule follows the general pattern printed the day of the last day of classes.

An Alumnus’ View of Freeland

Alumnus Recalls Freeland As “Source of Campus Activities"

by Loreta Wagner & Tim Coyne

"Freeland was every-...each year of the present college longs for the years gone by. Freeland's annual change in the form of the current student body is highly symbolic of the change that the college has undergone over the years, as well as the change that the students have undergone in their experiences and growth. Freeland, the first and oldest building on campus and the centerpiece of the campus, during the summer of 1913 these structures were Freeland Hall and...Freeland Hall, East and North Hall.

"The college catalogue of 1913 lists...that Freeland Hall was every year the center of student life..."The internal arrangements of the establishment are most complete and the most complete way to adapt the appropriate purposes; the dinners were held, concerts, corals and other performances, being more generous, air and well provided with every requisite for the health, comfort and convenience of the student..."The establishment is...well supplied with pure water, and in this connection, in the course of the ensuing season, so as not to disturb the health of the students.

The very spot from which for nearly 100 years Freeland Hall has been an integral part of the lives of students has been occupied by a new library — or at least by the beginning of the present college year, more class returns for their senior year, two years from now.

Freeland, the first and oldest building on campus and the focus of many of the campus traditions, will apparently be a casualty of the century building boom: the old landmark will be replaced in a few months with a new dormitory for men can be completed to compensate for the loss of room space.

The Very Spot From Which Freeland Was Founded

by Fred Jacob

In my four years at Ursinus I have given many prospective students tours, and in these tours Freeland Hall has always received special notice as the oldest building on campus, and also as the building that originally housed the whole college. Most visitors to Ursinus are impressed by the tall white pillars and New England green shutters. I admit...in the main floor of Freeland Hall. I usually enquired of my guests...about the facilities inside, be...the men who still cherish the hope...We'll Not Forget: A Promise to Freeland Increasing demands for better performances from our athletes has necessitated the development of improved training methods. No longer can a shot putter, football player, wrestler, or golfer merely practice his sport during his respective season and expect to be a winner. He must condition continuously, developing his entire body to absorb the stresses and punishement of his sport. Greater attention is focused on weight training, isotonic exercises, and other more sophisticated, conditioning gadgets.

Our "weight room" is inadequate to say the least. Condensed into a tiny corner of an already over-scheduled T-G Gym, the pride of our athletic teams have to hunch their shoulders to find room to do their presses. Their equipment is limited to a few bare essentials; several bars, weights, one combination bench-squad rack, a converted power rack-isometric rack. If he is fortunate and no dance class or girls' basketball game is scheduled for that afternoon, our weightlifters can gain admittance into the sanctuary of sweat and groans. He'll find men's basketball practice well under way, with over 20 B-Ballers pursuing their activity in various ways. The rest of the gym is swarming with grapplers of assorted sizes and shapes. In the tiny corner reserved for weight lifting, as many as seven other men are trying to exercise on that one mat allotted for weights.

For no other reason than the danger involved with such close quarters for the tossing around of heavy weights, the necessity of a real "weight room" should be apparent. Maybe we could get some real equipment thrown in with the deal.

The Ursinus wrestling team opened its 1966 season at home with a 21-5 loss to the University of the South. The Bears won only two matches in Coach Barry Gibson's first meet as a college coach as the tough Blue Hens (3-1) used six straight decisions in the last six matches.

In the five meet that Delaware flattened, the Blue Hens failed to find out just how far Ursinus wrestling is in for a long road. The Blue Hens won MAC races in a six-day stretch, but their dreams that they would face undefeated Havertford, Swarthmore, and Haverford, are dashed.

UC prepared for this strong home lineup by winning a six-man tourney earlier in the week at Swarthmore. The Blue Hens won 21-0, 31-21, Saturday night at home behind Barry Temple's 12 points. Earlier in the week, an unveiling PMC tourney made it a victory by upsetting the Bears, 15-16, in the Oates-smart pit of a gym.
